Mirro Showing Gladiators Set, Toy Mixer

The gladiators of old are "on the loose again," according to Mirro, of Manitowoc, Wisc. Reason for the announcement is that the company has just brought out a Gladiators Set, # 4144MT, $5.95 retail.

The set consists of a helmet, shield, scabbard and sword. Authentically styled, the helmet is of strong lightweight aluminum and has adjustable straps inside to insure a proper fit. A chin strap is also provided, and a drop shield, with eye slits, which covers the face and opens and closes. The hand shield is 16" in diameter and sports a red coat of arms. A convenient, riveted handle permits the young warrior to carry the shield easily

Both sword and scabbard are made of plastic. The sword, 13" long, is flexible and has a blunted end. Loops on the scabbard allow same to be worn on any belt, the manufacturer notes

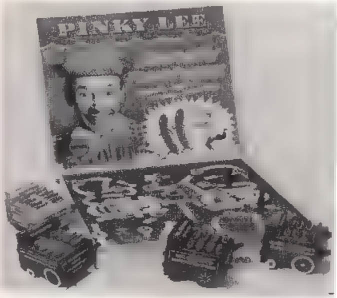
Lisbeth Whiting's "Pinky Lee & the Runaway Frankfurters"



An excellent trade response to Lisbeth Whiting's "Pinky Lee and the Runaway Frankfurters" is reported by Randy Patterson, general sales manager of Lisbeth Whiting Company, Inc., 1104 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn 16, N. Y

The item was an immediate and resounding hit at the Toy Fair, primarily because of its attractive packaging which is typical of the Lisbeth Whiting line and also because of the original and basic appeal of the game for all ages.

"Pinky Lee and the Runaway Frankfurters," a $2 retailer, is a large size boxed unit in full color and consists of "frankfurters and rolls," four cardboard frankfurter wagons, pawns, dice and an intriguing play board which is ingeniously arranged to provide endless hours of enjoyment and entertainment. The young ones make up frankfurter and roll combinations and place them on their respective wagons

The number will be launched by 40 leading department stores who will introduce the game in their areas in conjunction with newspaper advertising and television spot announcements to be brought on, when suddenly, as I raised a cup of coffee to my mouth, the ship gave a violent lurch to starboard and came to a sickening stop. There was no noise and no bump—we just jolted to an abrupt stop and remained heeled way over to starboard. The chocks were in the table which was loaded with dishes, but none fell to the floor. A little coffee was spilled out of the full mugs. The Skipper with a "What the Hell . . ." was out of his seat in a fraction of a second and up the slanting companionway and we all after him. Sai had left the wheel and was running forward shouting, "He bugger up finish altogether—true!" "True" in Pidgin indicates final.

We were within 125 yards of one shore on our right hand with the brown water swirling around us carrying several floating islands between the ship and the shore. From the slanting deck, the bow seemed very high up in the air. The Skipper called for the lead line and carefully sounded around the ship while the dhow was put over with the other lead line to find the bottom off our stern was six fathoms; off our bow, with three feet of the bottom paint showing, was four fathoms; while just aft of the foremast on the port side was only three feet of water, and on the starboard side—1½ fathoms. Inshore was deep water.

We were stuck on a hard clay bank about 10-12 feet long and rested on our keel just aft of the foremast. We looked to be in a bad way, and I remember glancing astern to see if there were any rain clouds up river. There were none and would be none for months to come. We were in a tight spot with 200 tons of Yankee firmly held in the clay bottom. Dodd, who had been up forward on lookout, was thrown into the netting of the bowsprit. Ken in the galley had just put a big pot of boiling water on the stove and it fortunately stayed there.

After a preliminary survey, the Skipper said, "Well, let's finish breakfast" which we all did in a hurry. I glanced at the clinometer in the chart house as I went below and saw that it registered 10 degrees to starboard. Neither he nor Exy were in the least excited--perturbed though they must have been at our predicament 'way up this sparsely inhabited river with no real help closer than Port Moresby over a thousand miles away—but there was not a change in their usual cheerful attitude to be indicated by their voices or manner.

Happenchance and Preparedness

Conrad says in The Mirror of the Sea—"He—man or people—who putting his trust in the friendship of the sea, neglects the strength and cunning of his right hand, is a fool." Our Skipper believes this, and if he had not, we would still be stuck up the Sepik. Two things got us off—one happenchance and one forethought and preparedness. There was a lone tree up on the 15-foot river bank—we could see its upper branches through the tall pit-pit grass, and it was opposite our stern. That was happen-chance. The Skipper had carried a never-used salvage roll of ⅝-inch new steel cable on a drum with the name Roebling stamped on the side, for five and one-half voyages 'round the world. That was preparedness.

After breakfast, the Skipper said, "Well, are you prepared to sweat?" We were. A crew of boys were sent ashore with machetes to cut down the pit-pit grass around the tree while another crew delved to the bottom of the lazarette and brought out the cable. I remember looking ashore and seeing Mac, late of the Marines, whacking at that pit-pit grass with a machete using both hands as if he were wielding a Samurai sword, and those tough stalks just melting away before him. Heavy blocks, shackles, wire clamps and the new 3-inch manila main peak halyard which was ready cut (but fortunately not reaved to save weathering while we were in the Highlands) was brought aft from the forepeak. Lydia ran the ferry to carry this and a lot of minor ropes and gear to shore.

The heavy roll of wire was suspended on a crow bar resting on two boxes at the open gangway through the bulwarks, so that it would unwind with ease. A rope was tied to the end of the wire and the Skipper, taking charge of the small boat himself, ran her well upstream and then into shore while the roll was controlled from the deck.

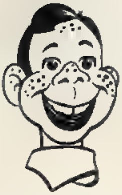
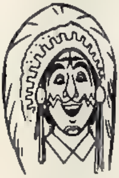
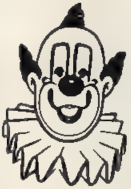
National Contest Under Way to Name Howdy's Bunny



Howdy Doody



Chief Thunderthud



Clarabell

The Howdy Doody TV show introduced a nationwide contest for the children of America on February 24. Boys and girls throughout the USA will be asked to "Name Howdy Doody's Easter Bunny" via one of Howdy's sponsors, Franco-American spaghetti (a division of the Campbell Soup Company). The thousands of prizes lined up is expected to result in another mail-pull of landslide proportions, judging from previous Howdy promotions. The prizes include

1. 200 Huffy convertible bicycles by the Huffman Mfg. Company of Dayton, Ohio
2. 100 Howdy Gym Sets by the Gendron Wheel Company of Perrysburg, Ohio
3. 100 Zippy the Chimp and 100 Windy the Dog dolls by the Rushton Company of Atlanta, Georgia
4. 2,000 Chief Thunderthud Indian Headdress Sets by the Connecticut Leather Company of Hartford, Conn.
5. 2,000 Electric Doodler Sets by the Harett-Gilmar Company of Far Rockaway N Y

From the contest's inception until March 19 the prizes will be featured in newspaper ads, as well as each week on the Howdy Doody television show itself. In addition, approximately 100,000 grocers will feature the contest prizes on case cards, window banners and shelf talkers. Sales representatives of the toy companies involved are preparing themselves for the demand for their items as a result of this tie-in.

Meanwhile, the Howdy Doody TV program continues to acquire new audiences, new laurels and new friends everywhere. Toy Fair time marks Howdy's eighth year on television, with over 1,800 performances to his credit, reportedly a larger total than any other network TV program. Along with their long-run record, the Doodyville citizens can proudly proclaim they are the number one children's TV show according to all TV surveys, states Kagran Corporation, licensors for Howdy Doody.

The year 1954 was the most successful in the merchandising operation of this fabulous puppet, it is disclosed. Many attractive new items were added to the Howdy Doody roster, and a new 28-page Merchandise Catalogue is being issued to buyers and jobbers.

Howdy Doody continues to make news on many other fronts as well.

Bob Smith, whose warmth and versatility have been vital ingredients in the show's magnetism and enduring success, is back on the air following his recent illness.

The Peanut Gallery, the tiers of seats in Doodyville where 60 young visitors watch the program each day, still remains phenomenally popular, according to Kagran. Thousands of requests are received each week for the precious pasteboards, with some parents writing for tickets years in advance. Some have even sent birth announcements to NBC asking to be put on the waiting list; currently they have to wait over 30 months.

Nineteen cities from coast to coast are now feeling the full impact of a merchandising program aimed at making the consumer aware of Howdy Doody fresh fruits and vegetables, and it has reportedly already gained the acclaim of parents through its effect on the eating habits of children.

A completely new version of Howdy Doody is now being seen on 14 television stations of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Seven sponsors have already been signed in the space of a few short weeks, with several companies negotiating for the remaining three segments.

A "Doody Dime Day," a March of Dimes TV appeal to American children on the Howdy Doody show, resulted in a deluge of dimes with thousands of dollars collected and turned over to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in the [illegible]

Thirty [illegible] stations have been added to the Howdy Doody [illegible] making for a total of 121 NBC-TV outlets throughout the country.

The Kagran Corporation, aware of the tremendous influence upon the 15 million youngsters who view the program daily (and the responsibilities to those viewers) state they are licensing only top quality merchandise, attractively designed and packaged and competitively priced.

THE HAWK MODEL COMPANY APPOINTS EYERLY ASSOCIATES

The Hawk Model Company, Chicago manufacturers of scale model planes, have announced a change in their distribution policy.

Eyerly Associates of Chicago and New York City have been appointed as sales agents for all states from the Colorado line to Maine, and southward through Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky and the Virginias.

Throughout the hobby industry Hawk scale model plastic plane kits are known for their quality and authentic detail. Their first model was a Curtiss Racer #600, introduced in 1945. Thus Hawk became pioneer makers of plastic scale model planes, a commodity that has since sold in countless millions all over the globe.

But in 1945 the hobby trade did not look with favor on plastic planes—they believed balsa wood construction was the only type acceptable to consumers. Sales were small in volume and few in numbers with consignment a necessary part of every transaction.

After a discouraging six months Hawk decided to try again, with their second plane a Gee Bee XL. Customer interest was still disappointing, but showing signs of improvement. By the end of their first year in business they knew Hawk scale model plane kits were here to stay.

Today, 10 years later, approximately 25 scale model planes comprise the Hawk line, with their Curtiss Racer still reported enjoying a much greater annual volume than during its introductory year.

Richard Mates, president of Hawk Model Company, announced that in placing sales [illegible] with Eyerly Associates, the Hawk line would automatically be made available to traditional toy outlets. Mr Mates further stated that a recent survey [illegible] indicates this broadening of their distribution will assure greatly increased volume.

Packages are being revised for greater eye-appeal, and exciting new kits will, it is said, be introduced at their Toy Fair exhibit in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel New Yorker. Incidentally, this will be the first showing by the Hawk Model Company at any Toy Fair.

Permanent displays will be maintained at 1107 Broadway, New York City, and in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago. William Rummel, Sr., and son, Bill, will be in charge of all eastern sales.

BRONCO-MODELCRAFT, INC. GEARING UP FOR TOY FAIR

Bronco Modelcraft, Inc., 55 West 17 Street, New York City, announces they are readying their showroom for the Toy Fair rush. "We expect," the company states in their announcement, "that many buyers are going to be on the lookout this year for craft kits—the public is daily becoming more 'hobby and model' conscious."

Special attention will be given, the manufacturer promises, to those dealers who wish to enlarge their hobby department and also to those who want to get started in a modest way to cash in on the increasing interest in model-building and hobbycraft.

ALMS & DOEPKE CLOSES ITS DOORS

The Alms & Doepke Co., Cincinnati, O., department store, closed its doors on April 11, after 90 years in business. The store covers an entire city block and has its own parking lot. Five stories of the seven-story building were active sales floors.

Cincinnati's oldest department store and once a top name in midwestern merchandising, Alms & Doepke was founded in 1856 by William F. Doepke and Frederick and William Alms. The store grew and prospered until the 1920s, when a top management dispute which ended in the courts, started it on a downhill journey.

An investment group purchased the store in October, 1953, and attempted to spark its merchandising activities and modernize the building to some extent. The store's wholesale operations were concluded in January, 1954, with a public sales event.

Failure to remain abreast of the times and to progress with its competition are reasons attributed to the closing of Alms & Doepke Co. doors. At its peak, the store is said to have done a sales volume of nearly $10 million, large for its day.

SHOPPING CENTER UNITS

Wm. H. Block Co., Indianapolis, Ind., department store, is to be a major tenant with L. F. Ayres & Co. in a proposed $7,500,000 Glendale Shopping and Community Center to be built on the northeast side of Indianapolis by Glendale Center, Inc.

Shelby Cycle Co. has again signed slugging Yogi Berra, star catcher of the New York Yankees and 1954's most valuable player in the American League, as the "Shelby Salesman of 1955." He is being featured in Shelby's spring sales promotion, which includes an extension of the free personalized license plate plan.

The president of Niagara Hobby, John Kavulich, says, "Carey is a real asset to our sales force because from personal experience he has learned the value of selling 'personalized service' and not just merchandise."

Esquire Novelty Renews Contract with Saperstein on Lone Ranger

Esquire Novelty Company of Jersey City, N. J., has announced the signing of a two-year renewal of their contract with H. G. Saperstein & Associates, representing Lone Ranger, Inc. This renewal represents a continuation of what has been a long and successful relationship, during which Esquire Novelty has been licensed to use the Lone Ranger and Tonto names on many of their products.

With the aid of a sound advertising and promotion program, plus a progressive merchandising organization, the products of Esquire Novelty which bear the Lone Ranger and Tonto names have become among the most popular in the country

Mr. Haberman, of Esquire says, "We look forward to even greater success with the Lone Ranger and Tonto names. Our faith in the popularity of western merchandise and the power of the Lone Ranger and Tonto names leads us to believe that the years to come will be more and more profitable."

Esquire Novelty states it will be one of the most enthusiastic participants in the forthcoming promotional campaign which is to be sparked by H. G. Saperstein & Associates of Los Angeles. The campaign is intended to add even greater desirability to the products of those licensed to use the Lone Ranger and Tonto names

Landscape Plans from Doughboy

There's a trend all over the United States toward roomier homes and more space for outdoor living and recreation, and Doughboy Industries reports it has introduced a revolutionary plan to help the public enjoy that situation. It will also help the trade, especially that branch of it dealing in plastic swimming pools.

The program calls for a series of landscaping plans to provide attractive settings for all of the pools in the Doughboy Family Line and above is Joseph A. Ferris, center, vice-president of Doughboy, and director of public information for the company, discussing two of the plans. At the left is Karl Humphrey, an architect, and right, Martin Fowler nationally known artist and designer, who made the sketches. The drawings show how a yard can be landscaped inexpensively to provide a luxury setting for a pool, the Doughboy announcement advises

Affiliated Doll Mfgrs., Inc. Organized in New York

IT HAS been announced that leading doll manufacturers have formed a trade organization known as Affiliated Doll Manufacturers, Inc. with headquarters at 1 Wall St., New York City

Philip Behrman of the Alexander Doll Company, Inc., is president of the new group; David Rosenstein of Ideal Toy Corporation, is first vice-president; and Edward D. Doherty, Horsman Dolls, Inc second vice-president. Secretary-treasurer is Jacob Brock of American Character Doll Company

"This marks the conclusion of painstaking work by many men of the doll industry over a long period of years," said Mr Behrman declaring that the industry "really needs to mobilize its best thinking to assure continued growth and improved service to the public and trade"

Commenting on the new organization, Mr Rosenstein said, "What we are doing, among other things, is to provide a practical medium by which every manufacturer can effectively use his own influence for stability and progress in the industry"

Executive director of the new association is Dwight M Allgood, long identified with trade association activities. Mr. Allgood said that he would give first consideration to a survey of opinion among sellers and buyers of dolls

"The corporate purposes of the association are explained in its by-laws as adopted on November 29, 1954," said Mr Allgood, "these purposes being to promote the general welfare and interest of persons and firms in the doll industry to stimulate, foster, promote and encourage co-operation and united effort among members of the doll industry on matters affecting their interests and welfare, to engage in investigation and research on matters relating to the doll industry, to advance and promote the use and consumption of dolls through the media of research, publicity, advertisement and similar activities, to reform abuses, and to do and perform any and other further acts which may be proper and lawful for the accomplishment of the foregoing purposes or any of them"

Official Trade Practice Rules for the Doll and Stuffed Toy Industry were promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission on June 28, 1947, following application by members of the industry and after a general industry conference and public hearing. Speaking of the rules, Mr. Brock said "These rules are the logical starting point in our work, beginning with some patient education in their practical importance and value"

The association released a bulletin to the trade during the Toy Fair which said that its object and plan was to evolve benefits for the "industry as a whole" by instituting three major lines of effort. These are

'Correction of Trade Abuses. Nobody can expect to thrive unless the industry stabilizes its trade practices and its economy. Sound trade customers must evolve. Scrupulous companies must be protected from ruthless practices. In short, the Trade Practice Rules must be explained and they must be respected. Only by such means can the industry, buyers and sellers alike be spared the losses of injurious competitive pressures

'Essential Services Contemplated here are such things as facts and figures on sales by kinds and classes, market prices market trends. We have been talking also about joint promotion It is to be recognized that the industry's station in the economy, and each company's station in turn, will relate to the public esteem which we earn, collectively

'Representation. There are many such chores which have to be done for the good of all, and which can be discharged only through impartial agency. Representation of professional character is essential for the security and growth of any industry in these fast moving times; among other trade groups, with government agencies. We are a big industry, yet just a speck of the economic universe in which we live . which is why we must stand together in support of all representations we may properly make to others'

Chairman of the association's Committee on Marketing is Mr. Doherty, who says that his committee "wants to let marketing people in the industry know more about the meaning and significance of the Trade Practice Rules The fact that these things become involved and hard to understand doesn't excuse us from getting to work. Actually the very difficulties themselves make this work of greater, not lesser, importance."

According to Mr. Behrman, a permanent committee organization within the framework of the association is to be built. "The Trade Practice Rules as promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission, naturally must constitute the heart of our initial program," he declared, "the Acts of Congress which these rules set forth, in the common terms of doll manufacturing and selling, will be of great use and benefit to the industry which needs to stabilize its practices in the interests of a sounder industry economy.'

"This is the best way to help the retailers too," advised Mr Behrman who expressed himself as "deeply convinced" that doll industry problems would be solved sooner for parts producers, manufacturers, distributors and retailers, "by more active cooperation among us, with wisdom and patience, under the law."

Membership in the association is reported to be open to any person, firm or corporation anywhere in the United States engaged in the manufacture, asssembly or production and sale of dolls, subject to approval of a written application by the association's board of directors.

MINIATURE REVERE WARE LAUNCHED AT CHICAGO SHOW

Miniature Revere Ware—a brand new line of seven utensils of copper-clad stainless steel that are exact replicas of the renowned cooking utensils—was introduced to the trade at the opening of the 1955 National Housewares Exhibit here by Revere Copper and Brass Inc

The miniature, or toy, line includes a 1¼" covered sauce pan, a 1⅝" covered sauce pan, a 2" covered sauce pan, a 4½" open skillet, a covered sauce pot, a coffee pot and a whistling tea kettle. It will be sold in sets of various sizes, retailing at the prices of $4.95, $9.95 and $14.95 respectively.

The miniatures will be packaged in colorful cartons similar to large Revere utensil sets. The interior display panel features an illustration of a mother and daughter looking at the utensils and bearing the legend "Just Like Mom's."

"In our opinion the new miniature line can be sold as a housewares item as well as a juvenile product," C. M. McCreery, vice-president in charge of Revere's Rome Manufacturing Company Division said. "We plan to merchandise it this way, as a companion piece to the regular line and make it available at the store on the same counter."

Strauss Toy & Novelty, Chicago

By HARRY MADLIN

"MY FORMULA for doing business is simple," says Otto Strauss, of Strauss Toy & Novelty Company, Chicago toy wholesalers. "I have built up a reputation for integrity and service while handling top quality merchandise in every category."

And this policy has worked wonders, too. Although the company has been in existence for only nine years, it has already outgrown its premises three times. Since May 1953 the firm has been located in a huge 6,000-foot combination warehouse and office building at 6754 N. Sheridan Road

The first toy showing was held in the 30 x 12 foot showroom last May Henceforth, this jobber plans to hold two showings per year In addition, of course, the showroom is always open to buyers and visitors

Strauss warehouses and handles about 1,500 items Obviously, all these items can't be shown at all times However, it's surprising how many are actually on display in the showroom. By means of ingenious display methods, not only are many items shown, but each one can be seen to excellent advantage.

Otto Strauss and toy dealer Emory Edwards.

"One of my customers gave me this idea," Mr. Strauss said, pointing to the north wall. "Notice that the bottom is about a foot closer to you than the top."

Made of brown pegboard, the wall slants inward at a slight angle. This tilt gives each item a maximum lighting from the brilliant, overhead fluorescent fixtures. No item is shadowed by one above it since shelf positions are staggered and the slant of the wall causes an upward tilt. This tilt also keeps small rolling toys from falling off Since shelves are made only as wide as necessary to accommodate the particular item, their vertical and horizontal flexibility is endless.

Both end walls are covered with pegboard attached flat to them. These can accommodate all sorts of items. At present, Strauss has the west wall lined with guns, pistols, holsters and items like that. The east wall displays small mechanical toys. Items can readily be removed from either the shelves or pegs for close-up handling.

The south wall is an outside wall. Shelving is carried across the entire area in the conventional manner. Adjustable metal shelf brackets on wall standards make it possible to move the shelves up or down to accommodate toy items of various heights

Down the center of the room, all the bigger items are lined up. This includes wheel goods, table and chair sets, doll carriages and so on. Every item in the showroom is tagged with a stock number and dozen price Dealers are able to browse around and make their selections in a leisurely fashion

"Be sure to make it clear that this showroom is an additional service," Mr. Strauss added "When I sent out the first announcements about it, many customers wrote and asked if this means I'll no longer call on them."

Otto Strauss still personally calls on all his accounts at least four times a year. He still goes out on territory from Monday to Friday of every week. Manager Kurt Herzka is always available at the showroom for inside duties

The company operates in a 200-mile radius around Chicago. This extends into parts of Indiana and Wisconsin

Mr. Strauss is sincere when he says he tries to help his customers in their ordering. He credo is, "Don't oversell, don't overload." He feels that selling a dealer more than he can handle is a disservice not only to the dealer but to himself as well "They can always reorder," he says, "so why overload?"

A perpetual inventory maintained of all warehouse stocks gives Mr. Strauss shipping information right at his fingertips when he's on the road. He finds this is an invaluable customer service which builds confidence in the firm.

"The main observable result of the showroom to date," Mr. Strauss said, "is that orders have been larger. Getting a view of the product and being able to think about it in a quiet, business-like atmosphere apparently helps dealers to do a better job of ordering"

CONCENTRATED SALES MANAGEMENT FOR THE SMALLER MANUFACTURER

a new formula for smaller manufacturers interested in growth and sales development

Dear Friends,

The development of sales in any organization be it large or small is one of the most important functions and responsibilities to be faced by management. To look upon sales development lightly, or to overlook any outlets in the active solicitation of sales, could very easily prove disastrous.

Facing these problems straight-on, I have devised a formula for the development of sales that has proven to be a boon to the small toy manufacturer whose present sales volume does not warrant the attention—and I might add the expense, of a full-time sales manager The plan in itself is relatively simple. The secret of its success is hard work and attention to details very many details—which management in most toy manufacturing concerns cannot ever hope to absorb.

My background and experience in the toy field has enabled me to establish the proper contacts and develop the "know-how" urgently needed to put this plan into effect. A brief outline will immediately show you that this sales management plan encompasses the entire marketing cycle, including work in price structure, costing, setting up sales representation, sales promotion, and general active sales management, which guarantees that a real selling job is being done in all territories.

This formula has already been proved in its effectiveness . . . and I proudly submit the names of the following toy manufacturers, for whom I am presently doing sales management work

Herald Toy Products, 4196 Bellevue, Detroit, Michigan . . . manufacturers of the Snap-blox line and the new Davy Crockett paint set with re-usable magic plastic.

Ironmasters, Inc., 220 N. 10th St., Brooklyn 11, N. Y. . . . manufacturers of outstanding modern furniture for juveniles and featuring TV dining desks.

Toy Laboratories, Inc., 2724 Darby SE, Grand Rapids Michigan . . . manufacturers of the well known Whopper Blocks and Whopper Wagon.

With the sales picture in the toy industry remaining highly competitive, it is imperative that YOUR organization have in its employ a man whose TOTAL responsibility is devoted to the development of SALES. And this is DOUBLY important to the small toy manufacturer. Therefore, I feel the plan I have briefly outlined above should deserve your immediate attention. It is designed to build YOUR operation into a more profitable, highly successful one. Why not investigate its possibilities TODAY?

Since last February, Welded Products & Manifold Corp., of 86-02 130th St., Richmond Hill, N. Y., has been conducting the copper manifold and water jacketed exhaust system business formerly owned by Joseph Van Blerck of Freeport, N. Y.

Frank De Hayes and Patrick Ressa are owners of this business and they have retained the services of several of the key personnel who were with Van Blerck for many years.

Frank J. Malis continues as office manager and Charles W. Hanna as manufacturing superintendent.

This company specializes in the manufacture of all copper water-jacketed exhaust manifolds, elbows, exhaust pipes, goosenecks, etc., for any make engine and to suit any installation. These products are also available in other non-corrosive metals, such as monel and cupro-nickel.

NEW FIVE-O-FIVE INTRODUCED

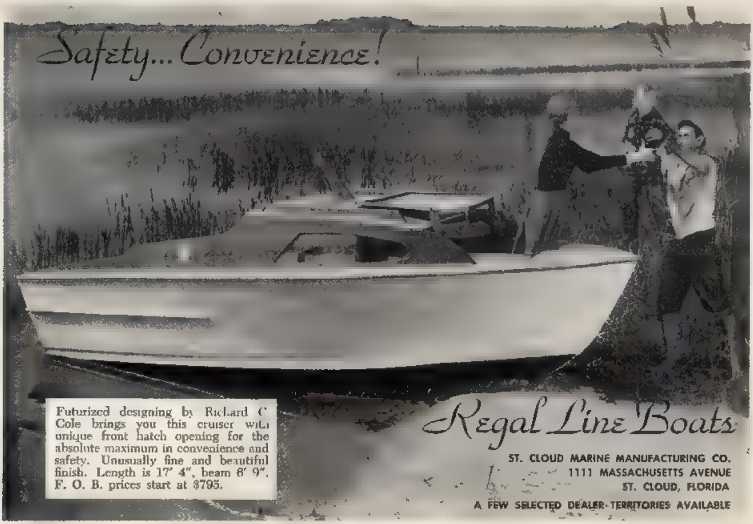
Three winners, each a thoroughbred in its class are being featured for the '55 sailing season by George D. O'Day Associates of Boston, Massachusetts. There are the well established Firefly and the 18-foot Jolly . . . plus an interesting new 16 foot 6-inch Five-O-Five by Fairey Marine. It's a fast boat, design of which was patterned after the 18-foot Coronet which proved fastest in a fast fleet of two-man boats at La Baule. The one-design Five-O-Five was created in response to demand for a somewhat smaller, lighter boat suited to the average man.

The hull is of moulded plywood which affords design characteristics not before possible in conventional models. There are three large buoyancy tanks, making it possible to right the boat and sail on almost immediately in the event of capsizing.

Fairey Marine's British Firefly is a fast, trim 12-foot one-design dinghy. It is a magnificently crafted boat with laminated, varnished mahogany hull . . . and is delivered fully rigged, including aluminum mast and Ratsey-of-Cowes sails.

There are enthusiastic reports about Firefly's ease of maintenance, and its suitability for younger members of the sailing fleets. Firefly is now a year 'round favorite, having proved ideal for frostbite sailing.

Uffa Fox's 18-foot Jolly boat is another Fairey Marine British one-design winner that offers exceptional value. This decked moulded mahogany Jolly comes complete with Ratsey sails (including main, genoa, and parachute spinnaker) and roller reefing boom, boom vang, and rubber air tanks.



Futurized designing by Richard C Cole brings you this cruiser with unique front hatch opening for the absolute maximum in convenience and safety. Unusually fine and beautiful finish. Length is 17' 4", beam 6' 9". F. O. B. prices start at $795.

MAGNA-POWER ELECTRIC ENGINE, manufactured by The Cartrol Corp., 2427 Charlotte st., Kansas City 8, Mo., is a pre-assembled unit for operating electric trains and other action toys. It operates from any standard train transformer 75 watt or larger, 6 to 24 volts.

The pull force of the engine is timed through four two-way switches, to cause the pull to start on the crank when it is just past dead center. This timing is similar to the ignition timing in a four cylinder gasoline engine. The engine has a top speed of 1700 rmp; the speed is variable by varying the voltage.

Packaged in a carton which becomes its own display unit when opened, the engine retails for $29.95.

MARINE ENGINE

THE Aristocrat OF MARINE ENGINES

This masterpiece of marine engine design is the direct descendant of that great Scripps engine which drove the motor boat "Detroit" across the Atlantic in 1912, the first trans-Atlantic crossing by a gasoline marine engine.

Today, that same rugged dependability and power are built into the Scripps V-12. Its 350 horsepower at 2600 R.P.M. is real horsepower—not a wishful, hopeful rating but an accurate, factual rating. You get 350 horsepower. It takes you there and brings you back.

Its 12 cylinders provide the overlapping power stroke so essential to steady, smooth, vibrationless power. Its V-type block and crankshaft are stronger because they are short. Its compactness saves engine room.

It is not a conversion of a car engine. It's all marine, built to deliver brilliant performance when the faring is fine and bulldog dependability in heavy weather.

It is used in fine boats all over the world—even in areas where dollar exchange is still critically scarce more Scripps V-12 engines are being installed today than any comparable power.

If you are powering or re-powering a fine boat of 30 to 90 feet, give special thought to the engine, the most vital item of your boat's equipment. Your peace-of-mind may depend upon your decision.

Scripps Marine Power is available for every boat and every budget—gasoline and diesel engines, fifty to seven hundred horsepower, Fours, Sixes, V-Twelves, true right and left V-12 models with symmetrically opposed and synchronized rotation for finest twin installation. May we send you our V-12 Booklet and the name of your nearest supplier? SCRIPPS MOTOR COMPANY, 255 Vinewood Avenue, Detroit 16, Michigan.

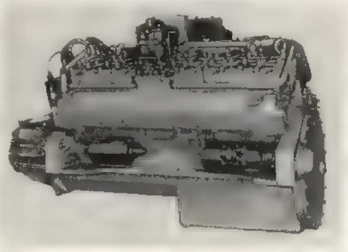
SCRIPPS 350 H.P. V-12 INCREASINGLY POPULAR

This year the Scripps Motor Company will complete a half-century of continuous specialization in the production of marine engines. So popular in 1954 that a backlog of orders is already piled up for 1955, the Scripps V-12 350 h.p. engine is rapidly extending its popularity with pleasure craft owners.

The Scripps V-12 delivers 350 useable horsepower at 2600 r.p.m with a piston displacement of only 894 cubic inches. It is available in symmetrically opposite construction and rotation for popular twin screw installations. It is an extraordinary power plant for cruisers up to 90 feet, fast runabouts, express cruisers and sport sedans. An overall length of 58½ inches saves valuable engine room space. The Scripps V 12 is an original marine design weighing 1,835 pounds, very little for an engine of its displacement. This motor can be installed with direct drive or with reductions of 1.5:1 and 2:1.

The Scripps Motor Company features conventional designs of proved marine engine principles in all of their marine power plants from 50 to 700 horsepower, both gasoline and diesel. In addition to the above mentioned Model 300, V-12 350 h.p. engine, Scripps features thirteen other standard and special high-speed gasoline models and a complete line of diesel power from 79 h.p. to 500 h.p.



The Scripps V-12 develops 350 h.p. at 2600 r.p.m.

NEW MARINA FOR CHESAPEAKE BAY

Contracts have been let by John L. and A. Charlotte Milne for the first unit of a yacht basin to be built on historic Kennersley Plantation, one of Maryland's best known farms located near Church Hill, Md. This initial unit will have slips for 25 boats from 25 feet to 50 feet in length besides space for transients and repair work.

Kennersley has extensive water frontage and the site of the development on Island Creek with depth at low tide of over 10 feet is considered by many authorities as one of the safest harbors on the Eastern Shore, high banks and woodland providing unusual protection to the boats from storm from any direction. A wide approach channel will be made and marked to the Chester River.

Kennersley Yacht Basin will be one of the most modern marinas in America. Each slip will have its individual fresh water connection with an electrical system designed to handle safely the power required to air-condition and heat the modern cruiser. To attract boat owners who live at some distance from the Eastern Shore but want to enjoy the cruising and fishing waters of the Chesapeake Bay, Kennersley has a 2,700-foot paved airstrip with a mile clear approach from the East which is less than 100 feet from deep water. For the convenience of boat owners, a modern coffee shop, overlooking the Chester River, will be built.

In addition to the Marina, Kennersley Yacht Basin will have a complete repair yard and a marine sales department. It has been appointed dealer for Richardson, Jafco, Trojan, Penn Yan and Mercury outboards and will stock a complete line of marine supplies.

SOLID STERLING SILVER

Introduces not only a strikingly new design of classical origin, but a pleasing departure from the conventional proportions of older patterns. Women say, "It's the kind of pattern that goes well with all china." Just enough length has been added to the knife handle to make it comfortable in use. Notice the slenderness of all handles, adding grace . . . yet weight, which makes silver durable, has not been sacrificed. Note, too, the added length of the salad fork handle . . . a practical length for all salads. A lovely pattern that offers the advantage of style, [illegible] butler finish. Trade Marks*

French Scroll

A modernized sterling pattern reminiscent of the classical period that prevailed during the reigns of Kings Louis XV and Louis XVI, in the years 1700 to 1800. Richly and delicately moulded into a series of sweeping, graceful curves, unbroken, yet carved to reflect the scintillating high-lights created by its soft, undulating surfaces. Soft butler finish.

Chapel Bells

A contemporary pattern of classical origin styled for the fashion of today. The intonation of the soft musical tones that its name implies best expresses the beauty and simplicity of this lovely pattern. Soft lustrous finish.

Southern Charm

A new, alluring pattern in table silver. Gracefully streamlined, vivid and fashionable. Strong and durable to insure a lifetime of use with pride and satisfaction to its owner. Concaved surfaces beautifully reflect the highlights and shadows. Time-honored motif of enduring charm.

Chased Romantique

Styled to remain in good taste being neither severely plain nor lavish. Scintillating reflections flow freely from the flute-like panels. Deep-Cut chased effect scroll and floral motif borders. Slender contour lends touch of dignity enriched by lustrous finish.

Prince Eugene Pattern

This exquisite pattern is an authentic interpretation of the late 17th and 18th century French Renaissance. A fashion created for the lavish use of Kings Louis XII and Louis XIV and in high favor today as the ultimate in decorative beauty.

Prince Eugene represents the heaviest weight pattern ever made by Alvin and uses the most costly set of dies ever cut. No expense has been spared to make this pattern outstanding among the finest patterns on the market today. Beautiful soft butler finish. All blades are Mirror-finish, Stainless Steel.

Chateau Rose

The flowing contour of this lovely pattern is enhanced by the easy-flowing scrolls that embrace the flowers of star-like sparkle. The rich style of Regency and Louis XIV inspired this splendid conception.

Della Robbia

This pattern translates the creative genius of the supreme craftsman, DELLA ROBBIA. The pattern follows the flower-and-leaf garland motif resting beneath the pediment of his architectural masterpiece—the tabernacle. Its sheer beauty, and period charm, make happy those who seek uncommon loveliness.

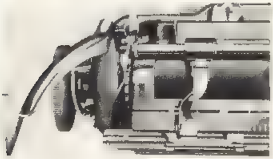
WITH NEW PAGE GAGE



HERE'S HOW IT WORKS . . .

You just turn the platen to the green figure corresponding to the length of the paper you are using. Insert a sheet in the usual way and start typing. As you get down to within 2½ inches of the bottom of the page red figures show you exactly how much space is left and keep showing you right down to the end! PAGE GAGE eliminates solid pages of spoiled paper, saves re-typing, keeps pages neat. Saves time and paper!

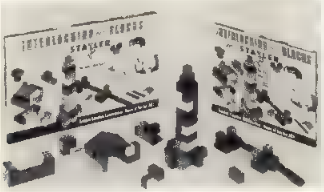
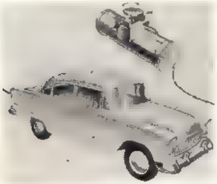
New Toys on Parade



INTERLOCKING PLASTIC BLOCKS have received a new treatment, and now feature realistic roofs and bridges at no extra cost. Made by Statler Manufacturing Co., 349 W. Ontario St., Chicago 10, Ill., they are lightweight, and made in four brilliant colors.

Newly designed, eye-catching boxes are another innovation for both the large and the regular sets, retailing at $2.98 and $1.98, respectively. The large set contains 40 large blocks, 8 regular blocks, 1 roof and 2 bridges. The regular set contains 26 large blocks, 5 regular blocks, 1 roof and 1 bridge. Both are packed 12 sets to a master shipper.

POWER STEERING has been added to some of the Tru-Miniature toys made by Product Miniature Co., 2240 S. 54th St., Milwaukee 14, Wis. The Chevrolet Corvette, Model No. 621, has remote control only, but the other models Chevrolet's Sports Coupe and the Sedan (shown here), and Ford's Country Sedan—have power steering in addition. An additional motor turns the car left or right to any degree when the steering wheel on the remote control box is turned. The car is guided around obstacles and over make-believe roads, emphasizing to the youngster the value of coordination in driving

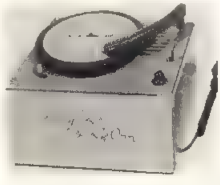


The new cars are two-toned in 1955 colors, and are equipped with tubeless rubber tires, wrap-around windshields, and tinted windows

Product Miniature Co. is also featuring a line of special cars, including a Red Cross ambulance, fire chief's car, city police car, and yellow cab. All except the cab in this line are equipped with a new high-pitch siren driven by the Spin Torque motor.

Also new in the 1955 line is a Ford tractor, the "600" with official gray, red and black colors. The steering wheel turns and the gear shift lever moves. The tractor, Model 3155, has rubber tires and engine details. It is 10" x 5¼" x 4".

ELECTRIC CLOCK AND PHONOGRAPH combination for youngsters has been introduced by B & R Electronics Co., 1701 Boone Ave., New York 60, N. Y. The sturdy table model phonograph, in a Peter Pan design, plays 7", 10", and 12" records in all three speeds: 33-1/3, 45, and 78 rpm. It also has volume control, switch, two-watt amplifier and speaker with Alnico V magnet. A child can operate it independent of the clock, as he would any phonograph.



The child sets the clock himself, thus learning by association to tell time. The phono starts playing automatically when it is time to awake. The phonograph is equipped with a new, lightweight tone arm and cartridge with a permanent-type needle that plays all type records in all three speeds.

Designated as model CP-100, the new item weighs 9 pounds, and measures 8¼" x 9½" x 11½"; it lists for $29.95. Model CP-50, with the same clock features but playing only 78 rpm, lists for $24.95.

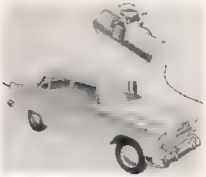
GIVE A HAND

"Helping the Red Cross seems to me as natural and satisfying as helping a friend of long standing who calls on you to give him a hand with a task you know is well worth doing," is the comment of H. V. Higley, Administrator, Veterans Administration.

POWER STEERING INTRODUCED ON TRU-MINIATURES FOR '55

The new 1955 scale models of Chevrolets and Fords from Product Miniature are available both with remote control and power steering. The miniature Chevrolet Corvette goes forward or backward at the press of a switch on the control box which holds two regular flashlight batteries. In models with power steering, an additional motor turns the car left or right to any degree as you turn the steering wheel on the remote control box.

This makes it possible to guide the car around obstacles and over make-believe roads and it teaches youngsters the value of coordination in driving.



These new cars are two-toned in 1955 colors, equipped with tubeless rubber tires, wrap-around windshields, and tinted windows.

In addition to the remote control cars, the Product Miniature Company is offering the following: Special Cars; 1955 Scale Models, Auto Kits; Action Toys; and an outdoor line.

RED CROSS AMBULANCE

The appearance and features of the 1955 scale models are similar to those found in the power steering line, except they have the three-gear spin-torque motor.

The line of special cars includes a Red Cross Ambulance, Fire Chief's Car, City Police Car, and Yellow Cab. All cars except the last are equipped with a new high-pitch siren driven by the spin-torque motor. These toys have make-believe flashing red lights on their fenders. They also have puncture-proof rubber tires, tinted windows, and are appropriately identified on the side. Yellow Cabs have, additionally, a billboard area on the trunk and a taxi sign on the top and doors and are equipped with the spin-torque motor.

The Action Toy line includes the Oscar Mayer Wienermobile with spin-torque motor. "Little Oscar the Chef" bobs up and down as the Wienermobile moves. The Ford tractor is the new "600" with official gray, red and black colors, featuring a movable steering wheel and gear shift lever. The pick-up bright yellow truck has the spin-torque motor. The Trailways bus is 18" long with a destination sign, spin-torque motor, and front wheels that turn. It's a scale model in standard colors and the box serves as a depot. The dump truck is made of Styron 475 in red with a gravel box which dumps and floating rear axle with tandem dual wheels. Another item in this line is the remote-controlled electric crawler tractor which moves on rubber tracks and has a snap-on bulldozer blade assembly, headlights, log chain, wagon, and metal drawbar hitch. From a control panel, which is furnished with transformer, it can be directed right, left, forward and backward.

The new line of Automobile Kits includes the Ford Country Sedan, Chevrolet Sedan, Chevrolet Sport Coupe, Yellow Cab, Farmall Tractor, and Chevrolet Corvette. All have metal chassis with Spin-Torque motor, except for the Farmall Tractor.

Davy Crockett
PLAY SUIT

Ben Cooper, Inc., of New York City, manufacturers of masquerade costumes and playsuits, are now making Frontierland Davy Crockett Playsuits.

The playsuit is reported to be an authentic reproduction of the one worn by the famous American Indian fighter who's featured on Disneyland TV, radio, movies, comics, and records.

Made of durable long-wearing cotton drill in woodland brown, the suit is trimmed with leatherette fringe and bears the official Walt Disney Davy Crockett emblem. The playsuit is topped off with a realistic plush fur hat with a real raccoon tail. Each outfit is individually packed and made to retail at $14.95.

As illustrated above, the playsuit is currently on display in Room 319 of the manufacturer's New York City showroom at 200 Fifth Avenue.

The Davy Crockett playsuit, and all other Ben Cooper lines, are to be carried by the following sales representatives:

Bill Fisher, 211 E. Parkwood Road, Decatur, Ga., covering North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Tennessee; Earl Newbill of Chapline and Company, 717 Railway Exchange Building, Kansas City, Mo., Nebraska, Idaho, Missouri and Kansas; Arthur Block, 108 S. Poydras Street, Dallas, covering Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana with the exception of New Orleans.

In addition, the line will continue to be represented by: Maury Axelrod of Jack Shapiro Associates, 208 North Wells Street, Chicago, covering Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota, Harley Cook, covering the west coast with showrooms at 1355 Market Street, San Francisco; and Sam and Herbert Drelich, who this year will celebrate 18 years of association with Ben Cooper, covering New York and operating from their showroom in the 200 Fifth Avenue Building.

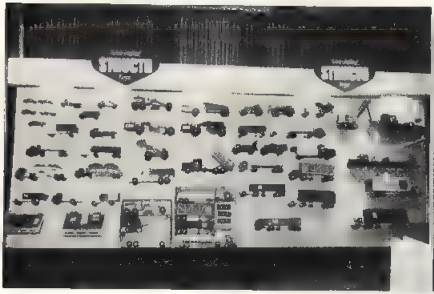
Structo uses pegboard to display toys



STRUCTO
STRUCTO

STRUCTO MANUFACTURING CO., Freeport, Ill., has utilized pegboard display racks to good advantage—at the recent Toy Fair and at other exhibits.

These versatile racks enable exhibitors to place items in any position and to space them exactly as desired. This manner of display is most adaptable to Structo's new and expanded line of steel, aluminum and zinc toys. They may be displayed together or interspersed among smaller items.

Top, left, is a close-up of new Structo toys mounted on a giant pegboard display. Note how toys are placed in a number of different positions on the board.

J. G. Gokey, chairman of the Structo board of directors, is shown in photo at top, right, pointing out to W. A. Wenner, president, a large full-color painting of the company's plant, mounted on a new pegboard display rack, along with other Structo materials.

This picture (bottom right) was taken during the recent Toy Fair. The three large pegboard displays used by Structo to present promotion materials and its new line are shown. Toy buyers, it is said, showed keen interest in the exhibit.

Craftint buys Artists Materials division of Devoe & Raynolds Co.

An expanded line of art and hobby items by the Craftint Manufacturing Co. of Cleveland is rolling from the production lines of the enlarged facilities.

Many other new items are being planned by the company following its purchase in May of the Artists Materials division of the over 200-year old Devoe & Raynolds Co., of Louisville, Ky.

The acquisition of the Devoe division adds professional artists oil and water colors to the Craftint line and these new items will carry the name of Craftint-Devoe. Craftint now offers, as an additional service, the complete line of the Strathmore papers and pads.

"This is the most important step we have taken in the history of our company," Louis S. Sanders, Craftint's president and founder and a pioneer in the development of home arts items, said.

"We have plans for many new things in the art and hobby field. The fact that we are now manufacturing the Devoe & Raynolds products gives us the opportunity to adapt them into the items that we sell through the retail outlets."

Recent purchase

Smith-Stewart Paper Products, Inc., 10 Jay st., Brooklyn, N. Y., has purchased the Mary Robbins gift wrapping division of the Robbins Publishing Co., Holyoke, Mass.

The company manufactures a complete everyday and Christmas line of self-appliqued gift wrappings, sold mostly through variety chains.

Mr. Smith, president of Smith-Stewart Co., has stated that the Mary Robbins products will be continued and expanded as a separate line to complement the present Sm-art line now manufactured by the parent company.

placed before the membership of the New York City Metropolitan Advertising Men's recent monthly meeting.

"Top management is neglectful of specialized markets," he stated. He told the group that many organizations follow the line of least sales resistance by confining their selling activities only to timeworn channels of distribution. Chain stores, syndicates, supermarkets, he stated, are prime prospects for many products . . . for these competitive times find lines of distribution criss-crossing.

Mr. Wershaw cited his experience as former vice president of Technical Tape in charge of marketing. He pointed out that the marketing and merchandising of products through specialized channels calls for specialization in sales, packaging and promotion. He firmly believes that top management must provide adequate direction and guidance to the sales and production staff in order to produce maximum results.

Waste in Shipping

BUSINESSMEN waste large sums of money every year by inattention to savings which can be made in shipping merchandise, according to Gregory Macdonald, Worcester, Massachusetts management consultant.

"The small businessman—who ships and receives relatively small quantities of merchandise—is the chief victim of transportation error and unnecessary expense," Macdonald told a joint meeting of manufacturers and jobbers during a business seminar which highlighted the annual Spring Specialty Show of the Advertising Specialty National Association in Chicago.

He declared that shipping costs can be slashed in many cases "if shippers check the different rates on different forms of transport, weigh the time element involved and seek the best combination."

In his talk, Macdonald pleaded for an "extra break" for the shipping clerk "who bears the responsibility for shipping problems." He said there are 8,000 different tariffs applying to transportation on the continent, and that thousands of supplements to the regulations are issued every year.

Leslie-Henry Hosts at Barbecue for "Wild Bill Hickok" Stars

LESLIE HENRY Corp.

The Leslie Henry Company of 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City, one of the world's largest makers of western play things, hosted a Toy Fair-time cocktail party on March 10 in the Grand Ballroom of the Plaza Hotel

In a setting reminiscent of the wide open West, more than 2,000 guests joined in an old-fashioned barbecue to honor two Hollywood screen favorites, Guy Madison and Andy Devine, whose top TV series, "Wild Bill Hickok," is a featured trade mark of the Leslie-Henry line

Milton A. Henry, Leslie-Henry's dynamic president shared hosting chores with his well-known vice-president Charles M. Sussman; Paul Kaplan, of the M. A. Henry Western Company, and Archie Palmer, head of Leslie-Henry's Canadian operation. Very much in evidence, too, was Irving Sircus, Leslie-Henry's genial veteran of many a toy show, with his son and assistant, Jerry Sircus, and young Howard Sussman. Also present was Bill Balas, eastern sales representative

The staff down from Mount Vernon included Joe Henry, plant manager, Alex Immet, his assistant, and the attractive Jean Richards Also on hand was Leslie-Henry's new showroom aide-de-camp, Lucille "Chip" Gaynes.

Baxter, Kelly & Faust Add Space

A modern 45,000-square feet addition has just been completed on the Stoneville N C, factory of Baxter, Kelly & Faust

This textile firm manufactures plush for infants' stuffed toys, having most recently introduced a Sanitized plush toy covering which is germ resistant and "baby-safe"

All looms now in operation at their two Philadelphia plants are being transferred to the enlarged weaving mill in North Carolina.

John B. Baxter, president of the firm, addressed the mills' 250 employees at the dedication ceremony and pointed out that increased demand for Sanitized Plush and greater production efficiency are the reasons for expansion.

O. W. SIEBERT COMPANY EXPANDS LINE FOR 1955

The new 1955 Siebert baby carriage and stroller catalog has just been released and includes many new items such as the Child Organizer, inexpensive and practical Car Beds and Auto Seats plus many new improvements in both the pattern and construction of the actual Carriage and Stroller line itself

For example, there are new, extra spacious interiors designed to give the more energetic babies plenty of room for activity and exercise to keep them happy and contented

The beautiful styling with "triple-tone" contrasting colors is an outstanding feature to the extent that Siebert Carriages and Strollers are setting the pace style-wise in 1955 and are becoming more than ever the value standard of America, it is added

The O. W. Siebert Company is proud to announce that all Siebert products carry three guarantees for the safety and protection of the dealers as well as the consuming public. One seal of distinction is the Good Housekeeping Guarantee . . . another is the Parents' Magazine Seal and the third is Siebert's own guarantee on all carriages, strollers and toys.

Here are a few of the extra features that Siebert is offering in 1955. First comes safety construction plus comfort design including draft curtains, water repellent materials, sun shade canopies and functional matching shopping bags. There are several combination models that serve as lift-outs for the original carriage and become a Car Bed or a Bassinet. Then, all the line is designed on the "Easy-Ride" Easy-Stride" wheel mounting and Rock-a-Bye ride spring construction. New Nylon-bearing wheels with a heavy duty, longer wearing tire are also provided These features along with the new triple-tone color combinations and the new sparkling modern chrome designs all add superior value to the Siebert line, the manufacturer maintains dolls, both as to price and variety. Dolls as a whole will be concentrated on in her rounds, she said, and items Lilienthal hopes to hold exclusively. Miss Myers sees a need for more variety in mechanical toys, so she'll be looking for anything new in this line. Noting the increase of business in housekeeping items, she will also be looking for novelties there.

McGreevy, Werring & Howell's toy buyer, James Wall, was most enthusiastic about the possibilities of toys tied in with TV. Not only those sponsored by favorites of the networks but promoted via this medium. He feels that games are on the increase and should be watched carefully for numbers that will catch public interest. For early promotions their stores have done well with playground numbers featured at $29.95. At the Toy Fair they will look for items that can be worked into specials, that can't be thrown on the market at a national price quote.

a third adjoining store. The extra space has given him room to "departmentalize"—to keep all the girls' items in the oldest section of the store, the boys' in the newest, and the games in the middle. It has also relieved the crowded situation and "we discovered some items stashed away under shelves we had forgotten were there."

The ultimate link in the chain of success is service to his customers. In the first place Mr. Cox makes a point of buying early and having all the new toys and stable items on hand. He has been able to acquire the difficult art of selecting toys before there has been much opportunity to see how they sell on the retail market.

As one of Sacramento's principal toy shop owners, Mr. Cox has a history in the industry of about a quarter of a century. Before founding his own store, now starting its 11th year, he'd been buyer in the toy department of the Sacramento branch of Hale's Department Store. Previous to that he opened the Kress store branch in California's capital city.

Three Year Progress Report of L. M. Cox Mfg. Company

Engine powered toys that start easy and really work, that have appeal for every youngster and adult who likes to run things mechanical and that are as free as any mechanical device can be of service problems.

This was the specific, if not too easy assignment, that L. M. Cox Mfg Company, Inc., makers of the Thimble Drome line of race cars, engines, planes, etc., set for itself three years ago.

Today, it is probably no exaggeration to write "mission accomplished" beside this project Since the introduction of the first easy starting Thimble Drome Space Bug Engine, Cox has produced and sold over half a million of the miniature power plants, it is reported

Improving and simplifying the engine so that youngters—and toy retailers would no longer have trouble starting them was Step One in the Cox program Next was the development of the toys to take advantage of the engines. Analyzing the market, Cox saw first an opening for a ready to fly plane with a real aluminum wing. This first plane, the TD-1, is strictly a deluxe job selling for $19.95 assembled and $15.95 for "two minute" assembly

Continuing along its charted course, Cox introduced at the recent Toy Fair two new items for "volume sales"—one, a revised TD-3, an all plastic model plane, with new wing and fuselage five color paint job. The TD-3 is so versatile that it can be used as a trainer, stunt or a high speed ship. It will fly very fast or very slow at will and retails at $11 95. The two-color job with engine dismounted sells for $9.95.

As a companion seller to the TD-3, Cox has also introduced the first of a new pusher type racer, the Prop Rod, aluminum and plastic construction, at the popular level of $9.95. As a model, the racer is a low slung "car of the future" with bright colors and streamlined design The "Prop Rod" is a tether type racing car, to run with or without a tether. In other words, the "driver" simply starts the racer on any level surface and Prop Rod takes off entirely on its own. In a minute, it spins around and dashes off in another direction. Then another spin and off goes Prop Rod in a brand new direction As the ad says, 'every time you run it, it does something different" Here, early trade and consumer response indicates, is a toy with the action and easy operation and popular price for wide appeal and sales.

The Thimble Drome line is represented on the West Coast by Clifford Gottlieb, Los Angeles; in the Mountain States by Mountain States Sales Co., Denver; in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa by Stan Stokes, Kansas City; in Illinois and Wisconsin by Paul Oberlin, Chicago; in Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio by Clem Amorose, Worthington, O.; in the hobby trade on the Atlantic Seaboard and South by Tim Skinner, Norristown, Pa.; in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Washington, D. C., New York and Maryland by Ernest Nathan for other than hobby trade; and in New England by Joe Gross & Associates. The L. M. Cox Mfg Company also is represented in Sweden, Holland, South Africa and various other spots.

NORTHWESTERN OFFERS NEW "SLUGGER" BASEBALL GAME

It's "Batter Up" for boys and girls of all age groups with Northwestern Products Company's new baseball game, "Slugger."

Reported to be completely automatic in reloading and feeding, with pitcher and batter, "Slugger" is a large, sturdy, glass-covered, self contained game. Measuring 15" x 21" x 2", it has a multi-colored playing surface which pictures plenty of baseball action. A heavy, finished wood frame and metal legs are other features of Slugger." The game is made to entertain one or many players, it is reported; Hi Score can also be played.

"Slugger," which comes complete with polished metal balls and instructions, is #450 in the Northwestern line and retails for $3.98. The game is packed one to a carton, six to a shipper weighing 35 pounds.

MIA MOVES TO ESTABLISH A NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS

Three moves of widespread interest to the hobby and craft trade were taken by outgoing and incoming boards of directors of the Model Industry Association during the latter organization's Convention and Trade Show.

President Charles D. Miller appointed Richard P. Mates, of Chicago, to select suitable office and showroom space to serve as the MIA's national headquarters. The budget item for rental was increased and $5,000 appropriated to cover the cost of moving and decorating.

A new official bulletin of the Model Industry Association was voted. To be named Hobby Happenings, it replaces Sales Talk upon recommendation of the Association's Publications Committee. It will be published every other month and will save the Association more than $1,000 annually over its predecessor. Hobby Happenings will devote its columns to MIA and related matters—official and for the good of all members of the industry: manufacturer, jobber, dealer, publisher, and associates.

The board voted that the Executive Director Lawrence W. Rember put into operation as soon as possible a new MIA service for its dealer members consisting of supply items of bags, wrapping paper, tapes, stickers, tags, Christmas paper, remittance envelopes, and statement forms. This service, it is said, will save money for dealers and give them attractive artwork that includes the member emblem of MIA, a selling slogan, and some action illustrations of various model and craft product areas being worked and operated by youths and adults Imprinting will be included on some of the items offered It is hoped that the many details involved in launching such a service can be completed before the end of this year

Two actions were taken in reference to the 1956 Trade Show. The board voted that the 1956 Trade Show be held in Grand Rapids (Mich.) starting February 22 and ending February 26, with the first two days closed and the last three days open. The board further voted that "the people who display at the MIA Show be limited to those who display products to the industry that will be sold for resale to the consuming public as the ultimate purchaser, except that publishers of trade magazines be excluded from this restriction."

Before founding his own store, now starting its 11th year, he'd been buyer in the toy department of the Sacramento branch of Hale's Department Store. Previous to that he opened the Kress store branch in California's capital city.

buyer, Sid Stark, emphasizes that all spring they have been stressing the need to promote Easter merchandise. Because of the great volume done in the summer on backyard items, they feel too many buyers are overlooking the dollarwise importance of this "out of season" potential. Mr. Stark says they put out a 30-page book on Easter numbers, with the slogan: "Easter is Good. It is up to You." In this booklet they feature 32 items, not only soft animals and dolls but musical toys and novelties. In each of their promotions for certain seasonal projects they stress, "You Can Double Your Business," then give the stores concrete ideas with which to work. This buying office reports their stores have been doing well with gym promotions from $19.95 to $29.95 with early season ads, in addition to the spotlighted items for Easter. At the Toy Fair they will be looking for outstanding values in good merchandise . . . hoping it will not be slaughtered by discount houses. They, like other offices, are trying to get some individual items that can be featured exclusively. Looking for bigger and more variety in baby dolls, also. Games being on the up trend, they will be looking for new ideas in this classification; the same in good educational toys.

Felix Lilienthal & Company's Hermine Myers reported their stores would feature gyms at $29.95 in March, and that they had some interesting promotions on dolls for $1.98 to $2.98 slated for early dates. For Easter they have had some notable advance action on a sleepy bunny and dog, 20" long and 18" high, to sell around $3.50 to $4. With this store group, interest in Easter merchandise has indicated renewed impetus, since reorders were coming in before the middle of February on such merchandise. This office put out a catalogue with a range of soft items and some novelties, just for Easter promotion. One of their big between season sellers has been a large cloth dancing doll to retail for $3.98. At the Toy Fair Hermine Myers will look for more novel games, what with the rise in interest in games; and a better range in baby

New Crockett wagon

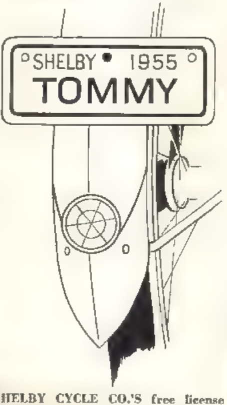
Modern Davys can ride in style in Radio Steel wagon

Radio Steel & Manufacturing Co., Chicago, has announced that its newest wagon takes advantage of the current popularity of the backwoods hero, Davy Crockett. Promotional possibilities for dealers for summer and fall are available in the free mats, window posters and other material offered by the company.

Color of the new wagon is a departure from the traditional red. It has a deep rustic yellow baked enamel body with gray wheels, and tractor style semi-pneumatic tires with chevron treads.

Lettering on the wagon is black, with black stripes on the wheels. The bed of the wagon measures 34" x 15½" x 3¾"; tires are 8" x 1.25". Packing is one to a carton, shipping weight 28 pounds.

Promotions in action . . .



SHELBY CYCLE CO.'S free license plate plan has been such a success that the Cleveland firm is extending its "giveaway" through 1955. New Shelby bike owners merely indicate desired name, and the black-on-yellow tag is mailed direct from the plant. Personalized note is popular with the small-fry.

How point-of-purchase displays boost toy sales

National advertising "conditions" the shoppers, but it takes an on-the-spot reminder to complete the sale.

By Donald S. Hutchinson*
President
Point-of-Purchase Advertising Institute, Inc.

TOY manufacturers and retail dealers are constantly fighting for year 'round sales rather than one big push during the Christmas season. One of the best ways to accomplish this is with eye-catching displays and point-of-purchase materials.

To merchandise a product today, manufacturers seek all possible advertising media: newspapers, magazines, radio, television, and point-of-purchase. All these media bring the consumer to the product except point-of-purchase.

Point-of-purchase brings the product to the consumer.

Most advertising media have one common purpose—to inform the consumer, to create desire, and to condition him for the sale.

However, the actual sale has yet to be made. Consumers may be pre-sold on the products you sell through other media but sometimes many weeks may pass before they are exposed to the product at the point-of-sale. That is where point-of-purchase displays step in. Again and again store displays stress the strong points of a product, reminding the shopper to buy.

Some of the most successful national advertisers and their agencies today agree that no advertising program is complete without point-of-purchase displays. Unbiased surveys made in markets of all types, for widely diversified products, prove beyond queston that store displays increase sales of the products they advertise. This is how we can define it.

People nearly always buy more items than they intended before entering the store. These additional sales are known in the industry as "impulse" sales.

And men usually leave the drug stores with more than just cigarettes or razor blades. Why?

Impulse sales

Because they were influenced to buy by window displays and store displays. The shoppers themselves gave that answer.

These shoppers told interviewers that they had made the unplanned purchases because displays influenced them in three different ways:

One: They said displays sparked an "impulse" to buy, such as a candy bar or a refreshing drink.

Two: They said a display reminded them of something they needed or wanted, and they decided to buy . . . and did!

Three: A store display sold them on new uses or advantages which caused them to buy!

Store displays were the culmination—the clincher for the shopper.

There is plenty of proof that the manufacturer who does a good job of store displays increases his advantage over competitors and makes his overall advertising program more productive.

A newspaper ad passes the customer on into the hands of a store display. Store displays and all other types of advertising are on the same team and have the same goal: To make the sale.

Eighty per cent of the people surveyed have stated that they made additional unplanned purchases. And 70.3 per cent made these unplanned purchases because they saw the items displayed and they decided to buy.

This is true in toy stores, toy departments, grocery stores, drug stores, department stores, variety, hardware, and other stores. They all can and do, make powerful use of displays.

In all of the above, two things are very important:

a) Repetition of sales points featured in advertising: point-of-purchase advertising is the final link in the advertising and selling chain, at the place where the customer comes in to buy: the retail store.

b) Point-of-purchase displays are widely varied in type. From window streamers and shelf strip tape to permanent types of counter and floor displays. Each type has its own special advantages, depending on the kind of store

ROLYBIRD is a backyard helicopter brought out by Charles William Doepke Manufacturing Co., Rossmoyne, Ohio. The sidewalk toy, complete with rotor and rudder, is designed for active five- to eight-year-olds.

The Rolybird, patterned after real helicopters, has a two-blade free moving rotor suspended over the head of the pint-size pilot by tubular steel which forms a "crash protector" fore and aft and on both sides of the cockpit. The "tail assembly" consists of a rudder and wheel—both of which turn at a flick of the airplane-type steering wheel. The pilot powers his craft with foot pedals which turn a chain drive connected to the front wheels.

Retail price for the new toy, said to be the first of its type offered to the toy market, is $34.95

PUT 'N STAY, a creative picture kit, enables children to make pictures, designs and numbers—without cutting or pasting—by using colorfully printed, easily handled pieces which stay on the easel type play board. A velvety textured finish on the pieces and the top of the play board causes the pieces to adhere.

Set No. 266, which lists at $2, contains four sheets of die-cut pieces ready to push out and use: Circus animals and performers; abstract pieces to make all kinds of designs, pictures, words, numbers; whole city of buildings, houses, cars and other pieces; and people—firemen, policemen, nurses, athletes, all the people of the city. The set also includes the 9" x 12" board with easels, a sturdy compartment box, and a full color illustrated instruction booklet.

The manufacturer, Kenner Products Co., 912 Sycamore st., Cincinnati 2, Ohio, also offers a set listing at $1 (No. 166) which contains just the circus and abstract pieces, plus the board, box and instruction sheet.

The '56 Ford Thunderbird—latest version of the fabulous car that inspired the styling of Ford's full line for '56.

The new Ford Fairlane Victoria one of Ford's 18 new models for '56. You see the Thunderbird kinship in its long, low lines and graceful silhouette.

The NEW '56 FORD...with new and exclusive new LIFEGUARD DESIGN

New Thunderbird styling is your first clue that something new and wonderful has happened to Ford in '56. All 18 new models have the long, low lines—the exciting silhouette—made famous by the fabulous Ford Thunderbird.

But, this is only the beginning of Ford's news for '56. Beneath that low, flat hood you may have the same basic engine that made the Thunderbird the performance star of the American road—the new 202-h.p. Thunderbird Y-8. You'll pass with added confidence—you'll go places as you've never gone before.

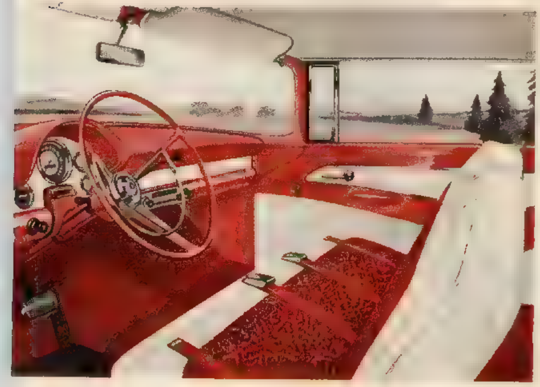
Exclusive new Lifeguard Design, however, is Ford's most important news for you and your family. It is the first major contribution to driver and passenger safety in accidents . . . the result of more than two years of Ford testing and research so that a safer car could be built.

With the co-operation of leading universities, medical associations and safety experts, it was found that most serious injuries in accidents were caused by the driver being thrown against the top of the steering post . . . occupants being thrown forward against hard surfaces within the car . . . or occupants being thrown outside of the car.

To give you added protection against these three major areas of danger, Ford developed a new Lifeguard steering wheel with a deep-center structure to act as a cushion in the event of accident . . . Lifeguard double-grip door locks to giv added protection from doors springing open under shock . . . optional Lifeguard cushioning for instrument panel and sun visors, to help lessen injuries from impact . . . and there are optional nylon seat belts that help keep occupants securely in their seats for added safety.

But there's more! Your Ford Dealer can show you luxurious new interiors . . . fine exterior finishes . . . quality throughout . . . everything that makes Ford the fine car at half the fine car price.

202-h.p. Thunderbird Y-8 engine



Ford 8's are more than V-8's . . . they are Y-8's . . . engines designed to run smoother, last longer.

The confidence and enjoyment you get from the split-second "Go" of all the new Ford engines is only part of the story. They have a rigid, extra-deep block to make them run smoother, quieter, last longer. This deep, Y-like design works its smooth magic in Ford's new 202-h.p. Thunderbird Y-8 (available in Fordomatic Fairlane and Station Wagon models) and the new 176-h.p. Y-8 (available in Fordomatic Customline and Mainline models)! Ford's new 137-h.p. Six also has deep-block build.

Hot Dolls & Thunderbirds. This year, for the first time in history, more than $1 billion worth of toys will be sold in the U.S. Few industries have soared so high so fast. Until 1914, inexpensive German toys reigned unchallenged in the U.S. When World War I pinched off European imports, U.S. makers, who had specialized in expensive dolls and ingenious metal playthings, whirred ahead with a legion of low-priced toys. American production methods proved more than a match for postwar foreign competition. Since 1919, when 644 domestic toymakers produced goods with a retail value of $150 million, U.S. toydom has grown to include some 2,000 manufacturers.

Under U.S. Christmas trees this year there will be such high-priced items as a 5-ft., battery powered Thunderbird ($395) that whisks two children along at 5 m.p.h.; a monkey ($250) that puffs cigarettes; a lion-sized lion ($300) with a man-eating roar; a 9-ft. giraffe ($250); an 8-ft. marionette ($300) that hangs from the ceiling and shimmies like sister Kate. Lionel Corp., No. 2 toymaker (1955 sales: $23 million), has a $100 model of the crack Congressional. A. C. Gilbert ($12.5 million sales) has a fork-lift truck and driver ($12.95) that swings oil drums from loading platform to flatcar. There are Teddy bears in storm coats ($24.95); a robot-driven bulldozer ($9.98) that backs up when it hits an obstacle; a mamma whale ($2.49) that swallows a baby whale; a remote-control Continental ($6.98); a Playskool lockup garage ($6); and aluminum armor for $125.

Ideal Toy Corp. ($20 million sales) has a "Magic Lips" doll ($15) that purses its mouth for kissing, and a 13-in.-long rocket car that blasts off at 20 m.p.h.; Lynn Pressman has a "Fever" doll ($5) that turns a sickly scarlet.

Ladder for Children. Toymaker Marx discovered early that children like to play with the things they see around them, and most of his toys are as realistic as he can make them, whether they are trains or cars carpet sweepers, miniature stoves or boats. But he has little patience with psychologist-blessed "educational" toys that are sold not as playthings but as "combinations of coordination influences." Snorts Marx: "The ones who buy them are the spinster aunts and spinster uncles and hermetically sealed parents who wash their children 1,000 times a day."

There is an increasing demand, however, for build-it-yourself toys that develop a child's imagination and dexterity. Marx, for example, has a station wagon whose transparent-plastic V-8 engine comes in 64 colored parts for the child to assemble himself. To teach his own children about the human body, Marx this year imported from Japan life-size lifelike male and female papier-mâché figures that can be taken apart, organ by organ. Next year Marx plans to make smaller versions (probable price: $14.98).

Toydom's Ford. Even his competitors admit that Louis Marx is the Henry Ford of the toy industry. Like Ford, Marx has used mass production and mass distribution to turn out cheap toys, e.g., electric trains had seldom been sold for less than $10 before Marx brought out a sturdy $3.98 train in the early '30s. Today, some

The Little King

(See Cover)

Through the swinging glass doors of Manhattan's "21" Club one night last week popped a roly-poly, melon-bald little man with the berry-bright eyes and beneficent smile of St. Nick touching down on a familiar rooftop. Louis Marx, America's toy king and café-society Santa, was arriving at his favorite workshop. With his beautiful blonde wife Idella—who looks the way sleigh bells sound—59-year-old Lou Marx toddled regally toward a table in the center of the downstairs room. The table is always reserved for Millionaire Marx by the divine right of toy kings—and the fact that he has never been known to let anyone else pay the check.

While most celebrities go to "21" to play, Lou Marx also goes to ply. From the enlarged pockets of his $200 suits flows a tantalizing trickle of toys for his friends, who seem to include the entire world, and number such cronies as Baseballer Hank Greenberg (best man at his wedding), Comedian Edgar Bergen, Lieut. General Emmett ("Rosie") O'Donnell, Boxer Gene Tunney, and Netherlands Prince Bernhard. For them, there are walking penguins and tail-twirling Donald Ducks, statuettes of the Presidents and lightly clad miniature nymphs, tiny cars and pistol-shaped flashlights, lapel buttons urging "Sit Tight with Ike" or "I Like Lou."

While other toymakers spend millions of dollars each year to promote their wares, Toycoon Marx is his own walking ad agency; he spent only $312 for advertising in 1955. He collects the famed and the publicized as though he were following the slogan on all his toy boxes: "One of the many Marx toys—have you all of them?" Marx, who still has a few notables to go, scrupulously includes those he knows in his endless fund of anecdotes and puts their children's names on his Christmas list. Among the thousands of gifts going out this week from Marx's toy shop are a 20-in. convertible coupé and a remote-control walking puppy for President Eisenhower's grandchildren. Altogether, Marx is a real-life Santa to more than 100,000 children. To the children of cops and waiters and charwomen, boys and girls in orphanages and other institutions, he gives a million toys a year.

Synthetic Security. Marx considers toys one of the higher forms of human ingenuity, and thinks a lot of the world's problems can be solved through them. "Apart from being good business," he intones, "it's important to buy children a lot of toys. When you keep a child supplied with toys, it gives him security, like an Indian woman gives her child by carrying him on her back. Toys give children love and attention synthetically."

Lou Marx, whose toys spread synthetic love as well as old-fashioned fun from Hamburg to Hiroshima, can well afford his lavish standard of giving. This year he will gross more than $50 million (and net $5,000,000), produce some 10% of all toys sold in the U.S. Marx's output includes every type of plaything (except bicycles and dolls), from plastic baby beakers to $2.98 toy sports cars that can be assembled by a seven-year-old. More than 10% of the 5,000 items made by Marx are mechanical, e.g., a clockwork Bonny Braids, who ambles realistically across the floor, an electric bingo game, a xylophone-playing Mickey Mouse. His 1955 best-sellers include met Marx at a party the next day. Idella, who is Ecdysiast Lili St. Cyr's half sister, married Marx. When Marx took Idella, who is two inches taller and 28 years younger, to meet General Gruenther on a European trip, Gruenther greeted Idella with: "What on earth did you marry him for?" Declared Marx "I'm the one with the brains." Although some acquaintances had predicted that the marriage would not last two minutes, Lou and Idella are now the happy parents of four sons. Each son has two generals as godfathers. The "second shift," as Marx calls them (to distinguish Idella's offspring from the four children by his first wife), boasts a total of 35 sponsoring stars. The eldest boy, six-year-old Spencer Bedell (the only second-shift Marx with a nonmilitary first name) is a godchild of President Eisenhower and Bedell Smith. Ike volunteered again when Emmett Dwight, now five, came along; his other godfather is Rosie O'Donnell. The other sons: Bradley Marshall, 3, and Curtis (for Curtis LeMay) Gruenther, 1.

Marx says he has never received one good idea for a toy from the generals. But Marx was one of the many who kept telling Ike about his political future. "You're on pages one, two and three of every newspaper," Lou told Ike in 1946. "You're the political Coca-Cola." His proudest possessions: an oil painting of the West Point chapel—Ike's first picture—and a portrait of Marx in a frame inscribed "Dwight D. Eisenhower—American-Born."

The first- and second-shift Marxes occupy a rambling, white-pillared Georgian mansion on a 20-acre estate in suburban Scarsdale, just off the Hutchinson River Parkway. Marx bought the red brick house for his first wife during World War II, but before they could move in, Renee Freda Marx died of cancer. After that, says Rosie O'Donnell, "Lou was both father and mother" to his children: Barbara, now 26, wife of Artist-Writer Earl Hubbard; Louis Jr., 24, a Princeton graduate, now a Marine lieutenant; Jacqueline ("Jackie"), a pretty, dark-haired Vassar graduate who joins New Jersey Republican Senator Case's Washington staff next month; and Patricia ("Patty"), 17, a freshman at Stanford.

Says O'Donnell: "Lou did a wonderful job with the kids. I'd go to his place, and we'd be having breakfast and the six dogs would be running all over the place. And he'd be telling his daughter, right in the middle of it: 'White is the color of purity, so if you want to get married in white, be sure that you live morally. Otherwise, get married in Reno or something. Or don't wear white.' "

Bedtime Chillers. Roughhousing with the second shift, Lou Marx likes to pummel and chase them frantically up and down the three-story house, allows the boys to squirt water guns and smash toys to their hearts' content. (Idella feels the boys are working off their aggressive instincts.) Once a week the Marx brothers pile into their parents' 13-ft.-wide bed for the night. There they are treated to a bedtime-story session in which Marx spins chiller-dillers about such bad guys as a deformed villain who sautés children's eyeballs for supper. The "mean-man stories," as the children call them, are intended, says Marx, to "immunize them against fear." Like the first shift before them, the boys are also being treated to Idella's digests of the classics, bedtime concerts of Brahms, Beethoven, etc. piped into their rooms, French lessons and word-building.

Led by Lou and Idella, the family swoops down periodically on a new branch of learning, e.g., for months they smothered visitors with I.Q., vocabulary and personality tests. Although Marx is an agnostic, both shifts belong to the Episcopal Church. Marx stays at home when the family attends services, but ships argosies of toys to the annual bazaar of Scarsdale's Church of St. James the Less.

Marx, a fresh-air fiend as well as culture fan, likes to bask in the sun on winter days at the bottom of his swimming pool, which is drained in September. There he sits puffing six-inch cigars (Jack & Charlie's "21" Selection), dictating letters to his Audiograph or reading a dictionary and marking the words and phrases he wants to transfer to his vocabulary. These are later typed by a secretary in a series of black books that Marx carries everywhere, studies in idle moments. For an hour, three or four times a week, he dons sneakers, a grey sweat suit and a Mother Hubbard bonnet that ties under his chin. With a black book in hand, he trots briskly around his driveway or the roof of his office building on lower Fifth Avenue as he memorizes new words. "After a stiff workout," says a friend, "Lou's breath comes in polysyllables."

Marx has puffed his way through Webster in twelve years. Now, on the second time around, his favorite expression is Dum Vivimus, Vivamus, which can be freely translated as "Live It Up." He found the exhortation so appealing that he had it embroidered on a batch of silk neckties that he gives away. His newest LABOR SHORTAGE is pinching industry. Business is so good that the Labor Department lists only 19 labor surplus areas (e.g., Philadelphia, Fall River, Mass.) around the U.S., the lowest number since 1953. In Chicago, Los Angeles and half a dozen other cities, good jobs in such industries as shipbuilding, aircraft and farm machinery are going begging.

STOCK-SPLITTING WAVE is rolling higher. Montgomery Ward proposes a 2-for-1 of its 6,502,378 shares (now selling around $100), will also boost its quarterly dividend from 75¢ to $1 on present shares, and hand out a year-end extra of $1.25. Other splits last week: Federated Department Stores (Boston's Filene's, Manhattan's Bloomingdale's, etc.), which will split 3,598,067 common shares 2-for-1; Phillips-Jones Corp. (shirts, men's wear), which wants to split 263,805 shares 3-for-1.

THEATER BUSINESS is good. For the first six months of the 1955-56 season, Broadway theaters have grossed $15.2 million, 16% better than the previous peak, in 1954-55.

JET TRANSPORT RACE between Boeing and Douglas is getting hotter. Braniff Airways has given Boeing a boost with a $30 million order for five 707s packing Pratt & Whitney J75 engines (v. smaller J57s on earlier 707s), will use them on both overseas and domestic runs. Sales score to date: 69 of Douglas' DC-8s, 60 of Boeing's 707s, including an option for five from Belgium's Sabena Airlines.

WESTINGHOUSE STRIKE, already in its eighth week, will probably be a fight to the finish. Negotiations between Westinghouse and electrical workers are still snarled, and 40 of 98 plants are shut down. Westinghouse is clearing the decks by chopping executive salaries 40% to 50%, cutting purchases and research to the bone; company will also lay off large numbers of white-collar and nonstriking workers.

MACHINE-TOOL PRODUCTION will be stepped up under a new Air Force program. Instead of buying tools for stockpiling, the Air Force will buy $52.9 million worth of tools for immediate installation to replace obsolete equipment.

COLOR TV SALES, currently lagging because of high prices, will get a boost from a new CBS trade-in plan. To promote its big-screen—and high-priced ($895)—color set, CBS will credit buyers with the full purchase price of their old black and white receiver.

FLOYD ODLUM'S ATLAS Corp., already one of the biggest uranium miners, is growing still bigger. For $7,250,000 Atlas bought more than 50% of the Almar uranium mine through purchase of Almar Minerals Inc., which owns about 15,000 acres with at least 600,000 tons of ore in the Big Indian area of Utah. Total Atlas uranium investment: $37 million.

ALUMINUM EXPANSION will put Henry J. Kaiser in second place in the industry, bumping Reynolds back to third spot. Kaiser will spend $280 million on two new plants, one at Ravenswood, W. Va., and another at Gramercy, La., boost capacity 50% to 654,000 tons annually, right behind No. 1 producer Alcoa.

GUIDED MISSILES will soon become one of Denver's biggest industries. Baltimore's Glenn L. Martin Co., at work on a 5,000-mile ICBM (intercontinental ballistic missile), will move its entire missile division to Denver, put up a $5 million plant by 1957. In addition, Los Angeles' Ramo-Wooldridge Corp., which makes the electronic brains to guide the missiles, will also move in, build another $5 million plant.

75% of Marx's toys sell for less than $5.

In the highly competitive toy industry, where piracy is almost second nature, the race is to the swift, the daring and the shamelessly self-imitating. Marx is all three. "There is no such thing as a new toy," he says. "There are only old toys with new twists." With a new mechanical twist, last year's submarine becomes next year's rocket ship; a flop may be face-lifted to stardom. After a 25¢ truck had saturated the market in the mid-'30s, Marx loaded it with plastic ice cubes (then a new product), called it an ice truck and had a new hit. With a new twist on an old friction motor, Marx three years ago was able to redesign an old firehouse so that it catapulted a hook and ladder through closed doors. He used the same motor last year for a heliport that shoots a helicopter to the ceiling.

In 1928 Marx got the greatest idea in toydom's history. Rounding a corner in Los Angeles one day, he stopped to watch a Filipino whittle away at a circular block of wood, attach it to a string and then bounce the block up and down the string—as his fellow-countrymen had been doing for as long as anyone could remember. The Yo-Yo, transformed by Marx from a primitive, island plaything into a universal preoccupation, sold more than 100 million and is still going strong.

Since most toymakers "knock off" (i.e., copy) their competitors' products, new toys are as elaborately guarded—and as inevitably filched—as Detroit's new car designs. Doll manufacturers solemnly lead buyers to a vault and there show them a Betsy Wetsy or a Tiny Tears. At Manhattan's Toy Fair last March, one manufacturer chained his gun to a radiator so no one could make off with it. The Ideal Toy Corp. sequesters its 18 designers in a closely guarded room that can only be reached by a secret passageway.

Robot Knock-Off. The gentle art of toy piracy consists of changing a competitor's successful design just enough to evade paying royalties to its originator. "When they copy you, it's piracy," cracks Lou Marx, who pays no royalties in the the U.S. "When you copy them, it's competition." When Marx "competes," he often cuts the price, but he always makes small improvements, e.g., when he "knocked-off" Ideal's bestselling mechanical robot, he put in a battery motor.

With the best idea in the world, a toymaker still takes a tremendous gamble. To put a new narrow-gauge train under Christmas trees two years from now, Marx will invest $500,000 in dies and materials. Unlike most toymakers, Marx finances his operation out of capital, thus can push a toy into production faster than anyone in the industry.

Marx is out ahead in other ways. His production lines are among the smoothest and most fully automatic in the business. Marx constantly analyzes machine layouts to cut wasteful operations. "When we find a machine that will do a 30-second job in 25," he says, "we'll scrap the old one, even if it's new." Marx was one of the first U.S. toymakers to switch to plastic. Though the first plastic toys broke too easily, he now makes most small toys of polyethylene, a durable material that can be turned out up to 64 times faster than metal. Unlike most toy manufacturers, who virtually close down for six months when the Christmas lights go off, Marx sells 90% of his output to the big chains, e.g., Woolworth and Walgreen's, which do a brisk year-round toy business, and Sears, Roebuck and J. C. Penney, which order in huge quantities early in the year. Thus he cuts costs, keeps his plants humming and most of his work force busy three shifts a day all year.

From Toys to Toynbee. When Marx goes off the day shift at 5:30 p.m., he switches from manual output to intellectual intake. In 1942, after his first wife died, Marx enrolled in a night course on Western civilization at the New School for Social Research. "I'd get to feeling morose," he explains, "and hit the bottle." He and Idella now attend five or six classes a week at the New School and New York University in such courses as "American Political Parties" and "Psychology of Religion." He finds that being a night-school student at N.Y.U. gives him a formidable fund of information with which to confound his friends, many of whom are experts in their own lines.

He is also quick to convert night-school theory into practical business use. Two department-store buyers who were moaning about discount-house competition in Marx's office one day were flabbergasted when the toymaker interrupted them: "It's like this guy Toy-nbee says. It's a question of challenge and response. These discount houses are the challenge that is going to make department stores into merchants again."

Brass, Beauty, Brains. In addition to collecting culture, Marx is frequently accused by competitors of "collecting" generals. Actually, he has known most of his brasshat friends since they were young officers. His love affair with the military started in the early '30s, when he was able to give a hard-to-get toy-train switch to the late Air Force General H. H. ("Hap") Arnold, who was then a major at Bolling Field. Arnold introduced Marx to General Walter Bedell Smith, now vice chairman of the American Machine & Foundry board, who was then a captain. Said "Beedle" Smith recently: "If anyone had asked me then if I would trade my chance at making brigadier general for a quarter, I would have grabbed the money."

When Marx sent Beedle Smith some caviar, Smith, who had no taste for caviar, passed it on to his next-door neighbor at Fort Myer, Brigadier General Eisenhower. Later, Ike dropped in to thank Marx. The toymaker's other military friends include NATO's General Alfred Gruenther, Strategic Air Command's General Curtis LeMay, General Omar Bradley, now a Bulova top executive, and General George Catlett Marshall. Even after they leaped into the headlines in wartime, Marx says, he was sure that the generals would be "forgotten like Bliss and Pershing," worried about the generals' financial future. In 1946, when he formed a cosmetic company called Charmore, Marx decided to help out some of his military friends by selling them shares in the profitable company at a nominal price.

Political Coca-Cola. About the same time that the generals were returning from the war, Idella Ruth Blackadder, then 21 and an RKO starlet, came back from an overseas stint with a U.S.O. troupe and favorite word is "charismatic," a theological adjective pertaining to one who has a divine endowment to carry on the work to which he was called. Understandably, Marx caused a sensation when he applied the word to Ike at a White House dinner before Ike's heart attack.

Perhaps one reason Marx is so anxious to expand his English vocabulary is that he spoke only German until the age of six. He was born (Aug. 11, 1896) in Brooklyn, where his Berlin-born parents, Jacob and Clara Lou, owned a small drygoods store and left most of the job of raising young Louis to a German maid. By the time Louis reached P.S. 11, he was known derisively as "The Dutchman." Marx still speaks with a guttural rasp and nurses a distrust for German. On annual toy trips to Germany, Marx hires an interpreter, although, as he admits, "I understand like mad."

How to Make $5,000. As a boy Marx excelled at baseball, basketball, ice-skating and shoplifting. "Everyone stole," he recalls complacently. "You weren't anyone if you couldn't steal." When he was nine, Lou proved he was someone by recruiting an accomplice and going to Brooklyn's Abraham & Straus department store. There they picked out a canoe, hefted it over their heads and walked out through the delivery exit unchallenged. The rest of that summer Louis and friends spent boating on Prospect Park Lake nearby.

The Marx parents shifted their little store from neighborhood to neighborhood with scant success, and there were few luxuries for Louis, his elder sister Rose and younger brother Dave. "But I don't remember feeling my life was tough," says Louis. "People in Brooklyn were warm and understanding, and I learned a lot about democracy. The class struggle? Someone sold that idea. We never felt it."

Lou studied hard to get ahead. He graduated from elementary school at twelve and finished Fort Hamilton High in three years. At nights he pored over books "on how to become a $5,000-a-year man." After a short-lived job with a druggists' syndicate, Marx stumbled "by sheer happenstance" into an office-boy's job with Ferdinand Strauss, whose Zippo the Climbing Monkey and Alabama Coon Jigger (a clockwork minstrel) were the first mechanical toys mass-manufactured in the U.S. Within four years, Marx had been promoted to manage the company's East Rutherford, N.J. plant, and soon afterward he had his first idea for a toy. One of Strauss's products was a toy horn that bleated "Mamma, Papa." Marx amplified the sound effects, redesigned the horn to resemble a carnation and brought it out as a paper lapel flower that doubled as a noisemaker at parties.

Zippo Climbs Back. The horn sold well, and Marx was made a Strauss director. One day the directors discussed whether the company should continue to manufacture and sell in its four retail stores in New York or give up selling. Marx alone urged Strauss to get out of the retail field. Instead of getting rid of the stores, Strauss got rid of Marx.

Toymaker Marx in Training

"It's like this guy Toy-nbee says."

In his next job, as salesman for a Vermont wood-products company, Marx redesigned a line of wooden toys, and sales soared from 15,000 to 1,500,000 in two years. At the same time, Louis and brother Dave set themselves up as middlemen. Their specialty was to figure out how to cut costs on a 10¢ toy. Then they would land an order, farm out the manufacturing and pocket the profit. Before he was 21, Lou Marx had served a hitch in the Army, risen from private to sergeant, and, back in civilian clothes, realized his ambition of making $5,000 a year.

In 1921 brothers Louis and Dave started in to make toys themselves. They bought the dies for Zippo and the Coon Jigger after Strauss had gone bankrupt. The monkey and the minstrel had been on the market for more than 20 years, but Marx gave them bright new colors, brought out bigger models, and sold 8,000,000 of each. By the time he was 26, Marx was a millionaire and convinced that, in the toy industry, there is nothing new under the sun. To prove his point, he brought Zippo back this year, redesigned, rechristened (Jocko) and repriced.

Hard-driving Louis and easygoing brother Dave (known to friends as "Mako" and "Spendo") now have six U.S. factories, wholly owned British and Canadian subsidiaries, and toy-manufacturing interests in Germany, France, Mexico, South Africa, Japan, Australia, and Brazil. Peak U.S. employment: 8,000.

This year, while U.S. toymakers clamored for higher tariffs to keep out Japanese imports (current share of U.S. toy sales: about 6%), Marx provided Tokyo toymakers with the cash and know-how to turn out toys that he contracted to sell in the U.S. as well as in foreign markets such as South Africa. This Christmas Japanese toys make up 5% of the Marx line and include many items, e.g., a $2.98 remote-control model auto that Japanese toymakers can turn out with 10¢-an-hour labor for less than half as much as it would cost to produce in the U.S. Marx bargained so closely with the crafty Japanese toymakers that Tokyo newspapers accused him of trying to ruin the industry. Marx was unabashed. "When in Rome," he shrugged, "shoot Roman candles."

As Christmas anticipation began to spread across the U.S. last week, Toy King Marx was busy wrapping up ideas for the presents that Santa Claus will be bringing two and three years from now. For Lou Marx, Christmas doesn't come just once a year, or even on Dec. 25. "When you come out with a real great hit," he says, "that's Christmas."

¶ William C. Whitehead, 61, moved up from executive vice president to president of fast-growing, widely diversified Garrett Corp., of Los Angeles, which does a $100 million-a-year business manufacturing aircraft and industrial equipment. Utah-born Whitehead, a World War I Navy pilot, ran his own flying service in Cleveland, then worked briefly for an aircraft-parts distributor before joining the infant Garrett organization's industrial-tools division in 1938. Four years later he was named manager of Garrett's Airsupply Co., in 1952 became the Garrett Corp.'s executive vice president. He replaces Founder John Clifford Garrett, who moves up to board chairman.

¶ Ross Rizley, 63, was reappointed to a second one-year term as chairman of CAB. A onetime small-town Oklahoma lawyer, Republican Congressman and Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, CAB Chief Rizley has done a notable job cleaning up CAB's backlog of cases. He has also worked to liberalize the regulations governing irregular air carriers to enable them to better compete with established airlines. President Eisenhower also reappointed Democrat Joseph Adams, another champion of competition, as CAB vice chairman.

Attack on G.M.

From a publicity standpoint, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney's four-week investigation of General Motors was turning out to be a dismal flop. Finally, last week, Joe O'Mahoney landed his antitrust hearings on Page One. To a packed Senate hearing room he brought 14 G.M. dealers (out of 17,000) who charged that they had been badly used by G.M. Among their complaints:

¶ J. Ed Travis Jr., a St. Charles, Mo. Buick, Pontiac and G.M.C. truck dealer, said that three years after he was awarded a silver tray for sales achievements, all three of his franchises were suddenly sprang to their telephones in a wild effort to rally Faure's supporters. The opposition did likewise. Ailing Communist Chief Maurice Thorez, making his first appearance since he suffered a stroke in 1950, limped in on a cane to cast a vote against Faure. But the dominant fact of the present Assembly is that it fears a return to power by Pierre Mendès-France more than it dislikes Edgar Faure. By threatening the Gaullists with loss of all right-wing support in the next elections, Faure's backers pressured a dozen or so Gaullist deputies into abstaining rather than voting against him. When the ballots were counted, the government squeaked through by twelve votes, 271 to 259.

Grudging or not, it was a decision the Assembly could not easily go back on. This week, as Faure called a full-dress debate on the election issue itself, all parties knocked themselves out protesting their ardent approval for the idea of consulting the beautiful, sovereign people.

ITALY

Keep Out

The economic bloom on Italy's face was not put there by Italians alone. Uncle Sam has paid most of the doctor's bills since war's end—nearly $5 billion worth.

And what happens after U.S. aid falls off? Beneath Italian soil lies the promise of rich oil deposits, perhaps enough to fulfill Italy's own needs and to save her expensive imports. Oil is not the answer to all of Italy's economic problems, but it is a good place to make a start. The question before Premier Antonio Segni's Cabinet last week was whether to entrust the big job of finding and exploiting the oil to the U.S. companies who have the capital and the experience to do the job, or to leave it in the hands of a state monopoly.

For three years U.S. oil companies (among them Gulf, Jersey Standard, Socony-Vacuum, Caltex) have been urging the Italians to modify their restrictive 1927 mining law, passed under the Fascists. The companies hoped for the prevailing 50-50 split of profits after taxes—the successful formula in Saudi Arabia and booming Venezuela. They also wanted the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with E.N.I., the government's oil monopoly, a swiftly growing octopus directed by a smart and aggressive apostle of state socialism named Enrico Mattei.

Decision: Monopoly. Premier Segni's government last week decided to amend the outmoded laws, but in such a way as clearly to favor state monopoly. It was a major defeat for the oil companies, and a severe setback to the U.S. efforts to help stabilize Italy politically by helping it to stabilize itself economically.

The government's proposal, likely to become law in a few months, specifies a 60% cut of oil profits for Italy, affirms E.N.I.'s monopoly in the potentially rich Po Valley, and grants E.N.I. such fat advantages over private competitors that in a matter of a few years E.N.I., without even half trying, ought to have the lion's share of the oilfields in continental Italy.* Example: oil exploration concessions to private companies are to be limited to 123,000 acres each. Should a company strike oil, its "exploitation concession" will then be limited to 25,000 acres; the government takes over the other 98,000 acres for E.N.I.

OILMAN MATTEI

A trickle from the underground.

"Look, It's Simple." On the basis of past performance, E.N.I. is ill equipped to exploit its great privileges. Under Enrico Mattei and with the inherent advantages of a monopoly, the corporation has become in the past two years a huge enterprise (15,000 employees), with holdings in 35 other companies, and has so much money to spend that it wields a potent influence on Italy's press and among its politicians. In the development field, it has expanded Italy's production of methane to almost 100 times the prewar total, a noteworthy achievement. But as an oil producer, E.N.I. has been a bungling flop. Where it has bored only dry holes and left, private explorers later found oil, so far, E.N.I. has raised only one gusher—in the promising Abruzzi area—and that by edging up close and spudding into a pool found months before by a private U.S.-Italian company.

But if E.N.I. has produced only a trickle, it is an Italian trickle. That simple appeal has been sufficient to gather public opinion behind the government's position. "If these amendments become law," said a U.S. oilman in Rome, "no major U.S. oil company will do any further exploration or production in Italy. We couldn't afford to." Said an Italian official with unintended ambiguity: "Look, it's simple. We don't want to become a Saudi Arabia or a Venezuela."

* Not affected: semi-autonomous Sicily, which, by letting in private oil companies, is already far ahead of the mainland in developing its oil wealth.

CINEMA

First Choice: 1955

Game of Love. Two French adolescents drift in the warm round of young love: a modern vegetation mystery made from a novel by Colette (Time, Jan. 24).

Wages of Fear. The year's most terrifying film. France's Henri-Georges Clouzot watches four rats die in a Latin American trap (Time, Feb. 21).

Marty. The year's best U.S. picture: the love story of "a very good butcher"; with Ernest Borgnine, Betsy Blair (Time, April 18).

The Great Adventure. Arne Sucksdorff's camera glides like a serpent through an Eden in Sweden, and the natural world like an Eve reveals her tender, terrible secrets (Time, June 20).

Summertime. Just one of those things, but it happens in lustered Venice to Katharine Hepburn and Rossano Brazzi, and Britain's Director David Lean is one of the best (Time, June 27).

The Desperate Hours. Hell, in the persons of an infernal trinity of criminals, breaks loose in a suburban home, and Director William Wyler enthusiastically fans the flames, with the help of Fredric March and Humphrey Bogart (Time, Oct. 10).

Umberto D. The camera sips, more in sorrow than in anger, the dregs of old age; Vittorio De Sica writes a fine finis to the neorealist era in Italian cinema (Time, Dec. 12).

The Man with the Golden Arm. Nelson Algren's tale of a hot dealer who deals himself a cold card: heroin. A painful, powerful story of human bondage, in which Frank Sinatra is unforgettable (see below).

The New Pictures

The Man with the Golden Arm (Otto Preminger; United Artists). All that glitters is not necessarily tin foil. In this picture the moviegoer is offered the prospect of a hoppy ending, in which the hero gets the heroin. The Johnston office, standing to the Production Code ("The illegal drug traffic and drug addiction must never be presented"), has stamped its official nix on the picture—the sort of thundering knock that usually brings a lightning boost at the box office. On the screen, however, the picture provides much more than the cheap thrill it promises. The hero is a man who gets lost on the West Side of Chicago and does not bother to go looking for himself. The script, mild enough in comparison with Nelson Algren's cruel, powerful novel (Time, Sept. 2, 1949) on which it is based, has nevertheless the crudeness of a thing scraped off some metropolitan sidewalk. But it has a human splendor, too—as the story of what happens to a man who cannot bear to let life itself happen to him.

Frankie Machine (Frank Sinatra) is the dealer for Schwiefka's poker game and a very good dealer he is, with "an arm of pure gold," an eye like an ice pick, and a nylon line that pays out smooth and hauls the suckers in. But Frankie is a man who carries "a 40-lb. monkey on [his] back," and the only way to knock the monkey off is to get a shot of joy in the main vein. He kicks the habit when he does a stretch in stir, and swears off cards, too, when he comes out; he has learned the drums in prison, and he has a chance to try out with a commercial band. But Schwiefka (Robert Strauss) is not letting go, and neither is Frankie's wife (Eleanor Parker), a demented leech who is systematically eating his heart out. While the wife bleeds him white, Schwiefka sets up a frame. Frankie finds himself in jail on a bum rap. In return for one night in the dealer's slot, Schwiefka bails him out. Frightened and discouraged, Frankie is an easy mark for the needle of Louie, the dope peddler (Darren McGavin), who suggests that just one little fix is all he needs to get him round the bend. One fix leads to another, and another to another, until one day he is sitting in a cheap hotel with a price on his head and nothing to stop the pain of being alive. He begs a blonde tramp (Kim Novak) who loves him to get him just one fix. She refuses and pleads with him to give it up. He says he can't. It's easier to roll all the pain up into one big ball and then kill it with a needle.

This, and not the hypo of sensationalism, is the point of the movie, and the point strikes deep. The picture is sometimes a penny dreadful, because the scriptwriters have seldom consulted their hearts as carefully as they have calculated their effects; and sometimes it is an old-fashioned, hell-fire sermon against moral indolence. At its best, though, the story lays bare the naked truth of human bondage, and this truth shines like a sword.

The heroic theme gets severely heroic treatment. Director Otto Preminger has dulled the sociological backdrop that Author Algren daubed so brilliantly, has edged his major characters more starkly against the mass. As a result, the picture is no intellectual slumming party but a hard-eyed study of human character, and the actors serve this end with a well-directed will. Arnold Stang, as Sparrow the dog stealer, looks as woebegone and unhealthy as a tenement tom just starting his ninth life on the garbage-can circuit, but he seldom hides the human quality of his part behind his television false face. Kim Novak is the type of the neighborhood frill, and she gives her big scene all she's got. Frank Sinatra, in particular, does a hurting job. Weary, weak, bewildered, battered, Frank's dogged Frankie is a creature who comes bitterly to understand that fate is character, fate is the thing a man can't give up.

Kismet (M-G-M) on Broadway looked like a Hollywood camel opera; as a Hollywood camel opera, it looks and sounds like the late hours of a Shriners' convention, i.e., fun in an overloaded fashion. Howard Keel, as the poet who goes from verse to better at the Wazir's court, cuts a tolerable fine figure in Mesopotamian laundry, and he sings like a baritone bulbul. Ann Blyth (see Milestones) is the girl and Vic Damone the boy. The music is borrowed din from Borodin, and except for Stranger in Paradise, it sounds like routine Tin Pan Allah. The incidental decorations are eye-filling, though —particularly an albino peacock that holds his end up with more style than most of the chorus girls show.

The Court-Martial of Billy Mitchell (Warner). On July 21, 1921, nine clumsy biplanes crossed the Virginia coast and rumbled out to sea like tired June bugs. Eight of them were loaded to limit with a 2,000-lb. egg of destruction. Below, on the deck of the transport Henderson, a crowd of U.S. admirals, generals, Cabinet members and Congressmen milled for vantage with a score of newsmen and watches sell for $22.95 or under because, says Lehmkuhl, "since there are more Chevvies and Fords on the road than Cadillacs and Lincolns, the well-made, low-priced watch will be dominating the market for some years."

The Ingersoll Man. It has been dominating Lehmkuhl's company for about 60 years. Founded in the mid-19th century as the Waterbury Clock Co., it ticktocked along comfortably in Connecticut's Naugatuck River Valley until 1892. Then a mail-order promoter named Robert H. Ingersoll picked up a doughnut-sized (1 in. thick) Waterbury pocket watch, decided that it could be mass-marketed for a dollar. It was so gigantic a success that Theodore Roosevelt, hunting in Africa, found himself identified not as U.S. President but as "the man from the land where Ingersolls are made."

When Promoter Ingersoll overwound and broke his financial mainspring in the early '20s, Waterbury bought his name and took over marketing of the Ingersoll watch. Waterbury fell on hard times itself during the Depression, but pulled itself out largely by making the Mickey Mouse watch.

Ski Flight. World War II pushed the company into military work and brought it President Lehmkuhl, a Norwegian with degrees from Harvard and MIT, who had returned to Norway to set up a thriving export-import business, later headed the board of an anti-Nazi newspaper. When Hitler invaded Norway in 1940, Lehmkuhl and his family fled. They skied some 100 miles from Oslo, over the mountains to the sea, got aboard a fishing smack and later a tramp steamer, which took them to England. Lehmkuhl found that Britain, whose watch industry had been crippled by cheap German imports, was badly in need of mechanical timing fuses for antiaircraft and artillery shells. The British gave him big orders, which he took overseas to the Waterbury Clock Co. With the backing of Norwegian capital he invested in the company, organized its switch to war production, including gyroscopes and other precision instruments.

In 1942 Lehmkuhl became the company's president, and two years later changed its name to U.S. Time Corp. U.S. Time now has five plants, including one in Dundee, Scotland, to take advantage of cheaper European labor for competition in European markets. But Lehmkuhl, now 60, has not forgotten Ingersoll's lesson on mass-marketing. Says he: "How happy we all would be if everything we needed could be bought for one-third the price we have become used to."

Turbine Auto. General Motors Corp. has built a four-passenger successor to its experimental gas-turbine car, the Firebird. The Firebird II's engine, said President Harlow Curtice, "gives promise of being able to operate with substantially the same economy as present-day automotive piston engines." Instead of wasting the tremendous blast of heat that comes out of the back of the engine, the Firebird recaptures about 80% of it by means of a heat exchanger, uses it to raise the temperature of intake air and thus improve combustion. G.M. does not plan to produce the titanium-bodied Firebird II, but it will be exhibited at G.M.'s Motorama, which starts its tour next month in Manhattan.

Steel Inspector. To find microscopic holes in strip steel before it is made into tin cans, General Electric Co. has developed a gadget that shines a powerful light on the strip to make pinholes show up. The detector can find holes less than the diameter of a human hair while the strip runs by at 2,000 ft. a minute.

Chocolate Straws. A drinking straw that turns plain milk into chocolate milk has been put on the market by Los Angeles' Frontier Foods Corp. The Flav-r Straw contains a strip of sugarless chocolate that dissolves in the milk passing through. Frontier Foods plans soon to add strawberry and root-beer flavors. Price: 23¢ a dozen.

Meat Preserver. To keep poultry, beef and other meats fresh for several days without refrigeration, American Cyanamid Co. has developed a product called Acronize. It contains a minute amount of aureomycin, an antibiotic. Applied to meat, it stops the early growth of bacteria, main cause of food spoilage.

American Airlines has ordered 30 of the new Boeings. Delivery is to begin early in 1959 and regular service in June, 1959. Here is how American's Stratoliners will shrink United States distances:

Los Angeles-New York, 4 hrs. 15 mins.
Los Angeles-Chicago, 3 hrs. 10 mins.
Chicago-New York, 1 hr. 25 mins.

FIRST jet transcontinental service!

There is only one first jet transport in America. It is the Boeing Stratoliner—an airplane with brilliant performance that has already been proved in more than a year of flight-testing. On a recent routine test flight, the Boeing Jet made history by flying from coast to coast and back in 8 hours and 6 minutes!

You will be flying in Boeing jet airliners first because Boeing was the one manufacturer with the faith and foresight to build a prototype—the "707"—with its own funds.

Behind the Stratoliner is 39 years of leadership in aviation—20 years of building high-altitude pressurized planes—and finally the vast experience Boeing has gained in producing and flying more big multi-jet, high-altitude aircraft than any other company in the world.

This road will save Bill Wood $150 a year

Oregon's Five-Year Plan for better highways will pay its own way in time and money saved. How is your state meeting the growing highway problem?

Bill Wood is a lumber salesman in Salem, the state capital. Once a week he drives through green and rolling Oregon countryside to Portland. Traffic is painfully slow on U. S. 99. The 52-mile drive is costing Bill Wood heavily in gas, wear-and-tear, and his own time.

Soon this heavily traveled portion of U. S. 99 will be a four-lane ribbon, five miles—and half an hour— shorter. Bill Wood will save an hour a week—six full working days a year. He'll make more calls on customers, and his expenses will be reduced. Oregon state highway officials estimate that each motorist will save $2.96 on a round trip between Portland and Salem. In Bill Wood's case, that will be a saving of more than $150 a year on this one stretch of highway alone!

By 1957, 145 miles of U. S. 99 will be entirely new. By then, too, 80 beautiful miles of U. S. 30, the Columbia River Highway, will be completed between The Dalles and Portland. These are two important projects in Oregon's Five-Year Plan, begun in 1952, to build 530 miles of new highway and rebuild or modernize 330 additional miles of existing road.

Oregon is accomplishing much, and doing it at a cost to the average car owner of about half a cent a mile—one of the lowest-cost items in operating a car! But much remains to be done: about 5600 miles of modernization and new construction, according to the latest official estimate.

Like Oregon, your state is working hard to improve its roads. Give it the support of your voice and your vote. After all, it's your money, your time, your life that your state's highway program saves.

The U.S. seems to be pretty statistical-minded when it comes to the U.S. farmer and his howl. Our receipts are up but our operating expenses are up also. How can we buy the items needed and economize? We can—by working 18 hours a day, as many do who show the 11% profit, and use 12- and 13-year-old children to work as unpaid labor. Your city labor is working for shorter hours. Mr. Benson tells the farmer to work longer hours for less hourly wage. The farm situation is dangerous because the farmer and his family are damn mad

That Nov. 7 feature, "Big Game in the U.S.," scored a real hit. Now, in America, a refreshing new concept in fine motor cars

The excitement it stirs in your heart when you see the Continental Mark II lies in the way it has dared to depart from the conventional, the obvious.

And that's as we intended it. For in designing and building this distinguished motor car, we were thinking, especially, of those who admire the beauty of honest, simple lines . . . and of those who most appreciate a car which has been so conscientiously crafted.

The man who owns a Continental Mark II will possess a car that is truly distinctive and will keep its distinction for years to come.

Tests prove pickup of even NEW cars can be increased

Tested against leading 10W-30 oils in road trials by an independent research organization, Havoline Special 10W-30 proved decisively best for today's high compression engines. After 15,000 miles of grueling tests, pickup and pep of new cars using Havoline Special 10W-30 actually increased up to 15 per cent . . . as much as 18 per cent greater than test cars using other 10W-30 oils. New missile marches with the infantry

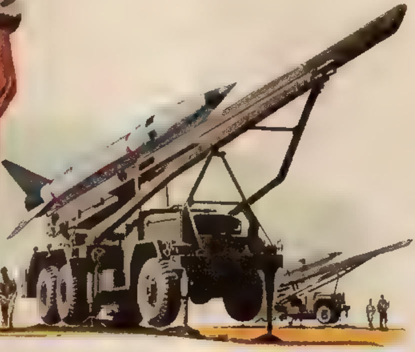
Modern foot soldiers do more riding than walking. Trucks, tanks and parachutes give the infantry high-speed mobility that calls for equally mobile support weapons.

One such weapon is Honest John. Developed by Douglas in co-operation with Army Ordnance, this new missile is a free-flight rocket without complicated guidance system. It moves quickly into position on a special truck that serves both as transport and launcher. Highly accurate, Honest John can handle either a nuclear warhead or a single explosive round of enormous power.



The U.S. Army's Douglas-Designed HONEST JOHN Artillery Rocket

Defense is everybody's business. Development of Honest John by Douglas is an example of industry's role in U.S. defense. But weapons need people to make them work. The Army needs young men and women who agree that "defense is everybody's business."

frenzied warnings, all through that threatened day hardly a breeze was stirring north of Maryland. At Hatteras, N.C., the Weather Bureau's radar (which shows rain-filled air) watched Ione approaching with measured tread. She had a clear little eye in her center (the signature of a hurricane), and around it were elaborate swirls like a spiral nebula (see cuts). But Ione lingered; her eye grew dim; her spirals dissolved in a structureless blob of rain. Then she streaked off over the Atlantic as if she had seen a ghost. The apprehensive Northeast states got only drops of local rain and fitful puffs of wind.

Policy Problem. Far from being grateful, the delivered victims felt let down, and Eastern editorial writers turned in fury on the unhappy weathermen. A Princeton professor, Astronomer-Hurricane Fancier John Q. Stewart, 61, who predicted that Ione would "not be bad at all," denounced the U.S. Weather Bureau for its hysterical warnings. He advised it to play down its radars and rely on old-fashioned barometers. About the only people who were happy about Ione's behavior were the promoters of the Marciano-Moore fight. They postponed it because of Ione—and sold more than $150,000 worth of extra tickets.

The Weather Bureau had no defense except to explain plaintively that the behavior of a hurricane is extremely hard to predict. When a hurricane crosses the shore line, as Ione did, it generally loses its vigor. But sometimes it does not. Hurricane Hazel in 1954, roared all the way to Canada, doing serious damage north of Toronto. A hurricane's path is capricious, too It generally curves toward the east, pushed by the westerly winds of north temperate latitudes. But some hurricanes, for no apparent reason, move northwest.

Ione's sudden flight across the Atlantic was caused by a southerly veering of the 'jet stream,' the great, high altitude wind that blows around the earth. The Weather Bureau says it came unexpectedly down to Virginia, arriving just in time to stop Ione's northward progress and push her toward Newfoundland.

Next time a hurricane threatens the U.S. coast, the Weather Bureau will have a serious policy problem. Should it predict the worst—and be denounced if the worst does not happen? Or should it be soothing—and be denounced even more furiously if the hurricane hits? Even if the weathermen predict just right, radio, TV and press hysterics can be counted on to feed the public's apprehension.

With bated breath and crossed fingers, the Navy has been watching the flight tests of the Martin XP6M-1 SeaMaster, the world's first multi-jet sea bomber. This week it authorized Glenn L. Behind the development of the SeaMaster is a vigorous bid by the Navy to capture an important chunk of the military flying business.

Take a tip from the tropics on termites!

If you're planning to build a new home, or an industrial structure, you should give some thought to termites. For every year, these saboteurs ruin millions of dollars' worth of wood. They chew the bottoms out of buildings from Panama to Portland, Maine or Oregon.

Termites feast on cellulose, the vital part of wood. They usually attack buildings through the foundations. They are relentless in their search for food. Like animated drills, termites will even bore through plaster and mortar to get to the wood they want.

Discouraged? Don't be! For chemistry provides wood with effective termite protection. This treated wood is called Wolmanized® lumber. Deep, thorough pressure-treatment with a chemical preservative protects this wood. If termites try to eat Wolmanized lumber, they sign their own death warrants.

This protection is lasting, too. Long ago, the tropics gave us the tip-off on the permanence of Wolmanized lumber. In the hot, humid tropical climate, which is custom-made for wood-destroying insects and fungi, Wolmanized lumber stays sound and serviceable.

Wolmanized lumber is clean, odorless, easy to paint. And chemical treatment is not expensive. Why don't you "take a tip from the tropics" and use Wolmanized lumber when you build or repair. Send for free descriptive literature. Koppers Company, Inc., Wolman Preservative Department, Pittsburgh 19, Pennsylvania.

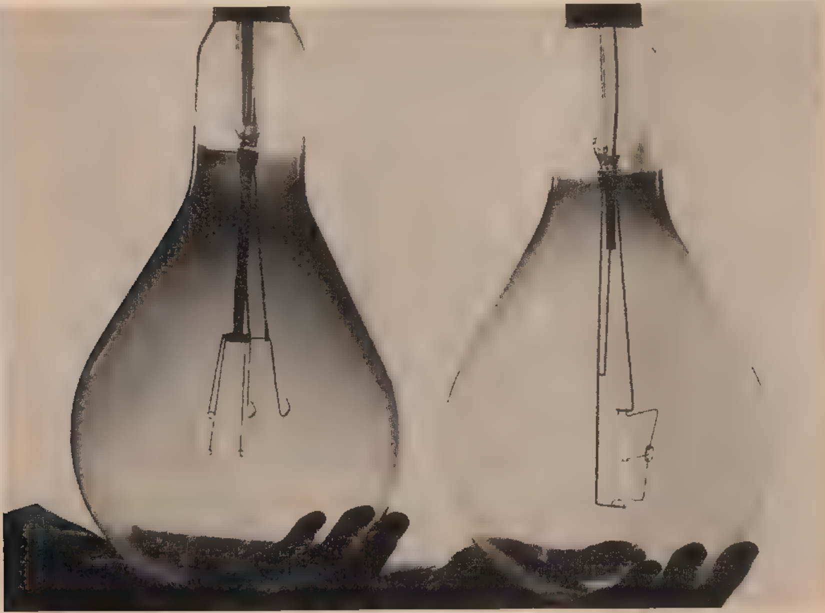
Announcing: New G-E Bonus Line of lamps, incorporating the most important development in light bulb filaments since 1913!

New G-E discovery uses revolutionary stand-up filament to give you 15% more light from a bulb



Compare standard crosswise filament, left, with new G-E stand-up filament, in bulb on right. Note reduction in bulb blackening after same hours of use

Promises America a Yearly Light Bonus of Over $100,000,000

General Electric announces the most important development in light bulb filaments in 42 years—a filament that stands on end. It gives up to 15% more light at no increase in cost to you for current consumed.

The 750 and 1000 watt Bonus Line G-E Lamps are available now, at same list price. Other sizes from 60 to 500 watts are being redesigned to use the new stand-up filament.

FOUR YEARS OF RESEARCH

Four years of intensive research were required to solve the technical problems involved in changing from the usual crosswise position to a vertical position.

The light gain achieved by the new stand-up positioning is a minimum of 6%. The new positioning makes it practical for the first time also to use a specially designed coiled-coil filament in bulbs of 300 watts and over. In these larger bulbs, the two improvements combine to bring the light increase to 15% during the life of the bulb—extra light worth the entire purchase price of the bulb itself!

LIGHT INCREASED, BLACKENING REDUCED

The new stand-up filament increases light output in two ways.

First, the hotter a filament burns the more light it gives, and the vertical position allows the filament to burn hotter without burning out any sooner.

Second, the effect of bulb blackening on light output is cut to a minimum. Blackening is concentrated in the stem of the bulb when it burns base up, or in a small spot at the opposite end when burned base down. Safely out of the way in either case.

$100,000,000 LIGHT BONUS

G-E incandescent bulbs using the new filament are called the G-E Bonus Line. The value of the light bonus they will ultimately deliver is estimated at over $100,000,000 a year. For more information write General Electric Large Lamp Department, Nela Park, Cleveland 12, O.

We are proud of the way the case was handled and the results achieved to date.

There was no "political stone wall" in the case. Mr. Brunt never suggested to the mayor that "covering up the scandal will cost the Democrats the election." Mr. Brunt never "went after District Attorney Samuel Dash, convinced him also that the cover-up would be a hot political issue." The Philadelphia Bulletin, for which Mr. Brunt works, never printed any such story.

On behalf of the loyal employees who work for us, we resent the implication in this article that, but for the persistence of a reporter, we and our subordinates would have violated our duty to the public.

MAYOR JOSEPH S. CLARK JR.
SAMUEL DASH
District Attorney
Philadelphia

¶ Newsman Brunt stands by TIME's account of his part in the case.—ED.

East Side, West Side (Contd.)

Sir:

Mayor Wagner may blow his own horn [Sept. 19], and he may fool many New Yorkers, most of whom will probably not realize how dirty the city is until the debris has reached eye level. However, he does not fool the thousands of visitors, especially if they are fortunate enough to be ex-citizens of the city . . .

MURRAY H. SCHEFER
Washington, D.C.

Sir:

. . . As a native New Yorker myself, now residing in sunny California, I can readily attack any criticism of N.Y.'s public service departments. I have never seen a city with such a well regulated rubbish or cleaning service. As for clean air, if New York ever had Los Angeles' smog problem, believe me, it would have been rectified long ago . . .

MRS. MARIE McCARTHY
Glendale, Calif.

Delightful Roll

Sir:

Britons and Test Pilot Roland Falk may be aloft [Sept. 19], but are no loftier than Boeing's top test pilot, Alvin M. ("Tex") Johnston.

During the 1955 Gold Cup Hydroplane race Johnston brought the handsome gold-and-crimson jet transport over the race course, gained a reassuring bit of elevation and proceeded to roll the craft in a delightful 360° arc . . .

GEORGE I. THOMAS, M.D.
Seattle

Name Dropping

Sir:

Mr. Charles P. Taft, a deputy to the Episcopal convention, was quoted [Sept. 19] as saying, "Our church is a Reformation church in fact." It would seem that Mr. Taft is a bit confused if he meant that his church was conceived in the Reformation. A study of English church history and Anglican theology would inform him that the Episcopal Church is in fact a reformed Catholic Church. There is a difference.

(THE REV.) C. EDWARD SHARP
St. Paul's Episcopal Church
Beaufort, N.C.

Sir:

. . . I am just waiting for the letters to roar in from unthinking Roman Catholics who will endeavor to point out that because we left the word "Protestant" in the legal soluble and feasible. We have our despots and the vindictive, but we also have far more of the brave, just and good. There is hope for solution and an amicable and happy one here, with sympathy and understanding to spare for those in other countries where the despotic outnumber the just.

LOIS BEDFORD
Los Angeles

Sir:

. . . Had we not waited until now to give the Negro equal educational and recreational facilities, the Southern Negro would be perfectly satisfied. In fact, I think that if we would now speed up our program of equal but separate facilities, they would be perfectly happy, provided that the N.A.A.C.P. and a few of the people from the so-called white states kept their hands off. If the people from the "less than 50%" states could change places with us from the "more than 50%" states for a year or two, they would fight the Supreme Court decision, too.

ARTHUR L. ALLEN
Moss Point, Miss.

Sir:

. . . We, the sixth- to ninth-generation Anglo-Saxons in the South, feel that we belong to the real persecuted minority in the country today, i.e., the descendants of the original colonists . . .

Incidentally, we're a little tired of being TIME-portrayed as magnolia-scented, bull-whip swinging, red-faced illiterates. Most of that prototype were our overseers, who have with their descendants returned to the North whence they came and are now writing learnedly for the press.

THOMAS M. DAVIS, M.D.
Manning, S.C.

Sir:

It seems that all the discussion about segregation has failed to mention the one and only thing that can be done to rectify this injustice done by the Supreme Court—and do it legally.

We must give the court an opportunity to reverse its opinion on segregation. I have great respect for our Supreme Court, but this is not the first time that this learned body has been in error, nor would it be its first time to reverse a decision . . .

I feel certain that a national vote on this question would not be in accord with the court's ruling.

FORREST C. WEBB
Lubbock, Texas

Death of a Boy

Sir:

The Till trial [Oct. 3] made us realize as never before how fortunate we were to be born with white skins. Our conscience makes the way of life in Mississippi as nauseating as the way of life in Russia. And what difference is there between the two?

Any group of people that permits this despicable thing to exist does not deserve the freedoms and privileges which constitute our American heritage. What a sad, sad commentary on this supposedly free and just country.

MR. & MRS. D. E. HANSEN
Evanston, Ill.

Sir:

. . . Before we Southern Protestants send missionaries to Catholic countries, we had better put our own house in order.

For the first time in my life, I am really ashamed to admit that I am a Southerner and a Protestant.

Brutal, foul-mouthed, yet strangely charming in his roguish, broguish way, he keeps his junior executives underpaid and forever conscious that they must undersell the rival A & P. Horgan's law is that "you never know where bottom is until you probe for it." In one hilariously horrible probing match with Horgan Co., a pudgy little enamelware dealer seems lucky to leave with his ribs, let alone his shirt.

Ailing and aging, John Horgan casts about for an heir apparent and lays his heavy hand of approval on Paul Marrow, his bright, personable sales-promotion manager. At the last moment, Paul decides he would rather write his own newspaper column and spend quiet evenings at home with a blonde than be the big knife in a stiletto gang. Before his novel peters out in this implausible way, Author Laing shows enough savvy about supermarkets to have been born and bred in one. Though it is fuller of outmoded caricatures than characterizations. The Giant's House does capture one last tycoon going his dinosaury way.

Marine Demimonde

THE EDGE OF THE SEA (276 pp.)—Rachel Carson—Houghton Mifflin ($3.95).

Author and Marine Biologist Rachel Carson has moved in from the vasty deeps of The Sea Around Us and made a beachhead on the ground roughly bounded by the rise and fall of the tides—the evolutionary home of man.

Roaming the Eastern U.S. coast from Maine to Key West, Author Carson covers the marginal world of the seashore with more than a specialist's curiosity. She evokes that sense of private peace and mystical wonder that Anne Lindbergh brought to her Gift from the Sea. She explores and celebrates a world of ferment and vitality, from the humble mole crab to the dog-whelk snail, from submarine forests to rock pools.

Lashed by the surf, lacerated by shore ice, alternately drenched and desiccated, the tiny inhabitants of the marine demimonde learn to live dangerously and adapt to the challenges of intertidal life. From a thousand examples, Author Carson evokes all the moods of the edge of the sea and of its inhabitants—strange, ugly, beautiful, bizarre. Nature's grace, order and mystery flow through her book like an underwater ballet. Again Author Carson has shown her remarkable talent for catching the life breath of science on the still glass of poetry.

It's remarkable how much the average typist's work improves when she switches to a new Remington Electric Typewriter. Fingers fairly fly over the natural slope keyboard . . . turn out more work in less time and with so little effort! And the end result is so wonderful—consistently perfect printwork for truly beautiful letters anyone would be proud to sign.

Remington Rand
DIVISION OF SPERRY RAND CORPORATION

Ask about our convenient Monthly Payment Plan a blues-loving customer and talk; her stories pack almost as much wallop as her songs. When she was six or seven in New Orleans Lizzie recalls she started to sing with the band jointly run by Kid Ory and King Oliver—songs with words like

Don't do that dance, I tell you, Sadie
That's no dance for a lady.

She was married at 16, but left her husband a year later and then joined the Cole Bros. Circus, singing with the side-show band. "I saw the whole country," she says. "I saw America like the millionaires didn't see it!"

The Gangsters Were Quiet. In the 1918 flu epidemic, she was seriously ill "I promised the Blessed Lady that if God made me better, I'd never get on a stage again. I got better all right. And one night, a boy friend come around and took me to a club in Bucktown. When we got there, he told the bandleader, ooooh could I sing. Well, it wasn't any stage, so I got up and sang Dardanella, and they paid me $25 a week."

For years after that, in New York and Chicago, Lizzie was something of a favorite. Those were heady days, with the big gamblers at the ringside. ("I remember Little Augie, he always wanted to hear Prisoner's Song—you know, 'If I had the wings of an angel . . .' Most of those gangsters were the nicest, quietest people.") In the Depression years, the blues were too real for comfort: Lizzie thought she was through. She worked as a housemaid, later as a barmaid. Even in World War II, she could not find a singing job. "Showfolks, gamblers and sportin' people have no loyalty. I was too fat and too old." Finally, four years ago, she persuaded a New Orleans disk jockey called Poppa Stoppa to put her on his program. Soon after that, she had singing jobs again, swept along by the huge current jazz boom. "I dug up my old antique gowns—crepe and satin—and my long beads and fancy combs and shoes with rhinestones on the heels."

The Music Was Different. Today, billed as vocalist with the Scobey combo, Lizzie is playing some of the country's better-known jazz spots (including, last month, Chicago's Blue Note). Everywhere, she becomes the favorite as soon as she opens her generous mouth.

But Lizzie's new success has not made her forget the beauties of the good old days. "I remember here come Jelly Roll Morton passing our house, on the way to play in Storyville," she muses. "I recollect Ory and Oliver. It used to be it was so hot they'd drop one suspender, open their shirts and their pants so's they'd be comfortable, and would they play! The music then was different. Everybody played close. They listened to each other. They played a strong melody and pretty, pretty chords. Nowadays, they play before the beat, after the beat, everything but on the beat."

Not only the music has changed. "New Orleans isn't the same any more either. It's gettin' so fancy with tourists and all. I hope I die before they make a Northern city out of New Orleans."

Who for '56?

Sir:

Of course, it goes without saying that we aren't particularly interested in having De Sapio run the country with Harriman as regent; Stevenson may have his faults and quirks, but we independents feel he is basically honest and never opportunistic.

MRS. C. E. EADY

Sir:

Adlai Stevenson can turn an apter phrase than anyone else in sight. It is easier to make epigrams, though, than to make the decisions required of a President. Stevenson does not give the impression of being particularly decisive. He might weigh his decisions so carefully as never to make any; our late foreign policy on China seemed to be conducted in this way. We "waited for the dust to settle" for so long that in the end we did nothing. Stevenson seems to have no clear idea of how far the American people will follow political leadership.

The fact is that there are better qualified men of the same political persuasion and same party. There is even one from Stevenson's own state—Senator Paul Douglas.

scarce precious commodities. As more and more new bidders, ranging from newly prosperous Europeans to newly rich Texans and Brazilian millionaires, start cutting themselves into art for both prestige and speculation, the supply of currently approved classics is drying up. Older masterpieces have all but disappeared from the market—either by "cold socialization," i.e., being declared "national treasures," or by winding up in art museums. As one London dealer sadly remarked: "Museums don't die."

Prospective collectors who still want to deal themselves in at the big auctions must be willing to pay up to $25,000 for a painting. When the really big collectors decide to show their hands, the price can go over the $100,000 mark, as it did when France's Mme. Jean Walter paid $113,000 to outbid Swiss Gun Manufacturer Emil Buhrle for a Cézanne still life Pommes et Biscuits, at the 1952 Gabriel Cognacq sale in Paris

For the average collector, willing to pay from peanuts to $3,000 for a painting he likes, the best bets are the "speculative growth issues," the moderns. Here the buyer pays now, collects later. If he bets wrong he at least has his wall covered. If he is right, he can boast to his grandchildren and take a nice capital gain on his investment.

Guest Artist

To give an added fillip to its annual luncheon, France's Goncourt Academy (which meets this week to bestow its award and bestsellerdom on a French author) has invited an artist to come make its family portrait. When news of the artist's name was announced Le Figaro Littéraire issued a warning. "Under the circumstances, it will be necessary to banish the bottles and partridges from the tables, for the painter honored by the Goncourt does not like rosy cheeks, but prefers gaunt figures bent over plates garnished with fish vertebrae." The guest artist: Bernard Buffet, 27, France's most popular painter (TIME, March 21), whose portraits depict the leanest and hungriest figures since Picasso's Frugal Repast.

sent his son Seydou N'jimoluh Njoya off to learn French in a Protestant mission school. In time, Seydou himself became Sultan and decided to outdo his father in progress. Though he surrounded himself with the traditional swarms of wives and concubines (59 in all), and wore the heavy cloaks and turbans of his ancestors, Sultan Seydou had picked up a few modern ideas at school.

Seydou decided to get some service out of the ancient feudal officers at his father's court. The royal Master of Ceremonies was put in charge of street cleaning; the Keeper of the Weapons was made health commissioner; the general of the nonexistent army was made chief truant officer. With French government help, a new industry, coffee culture, was introduced, and—in direct answer to the newly literate demands of the Sultan's people—a postal service was begun. "With tradition as the father and modernization, brought by the French, as mother," said the Sultan, "we shall produce a healthy child."

SULTAN-MAYOR SEYDOU
"Election has its good sides."

Last January energetic French High Commissioner Roland Pré instituted some reforms of his own. Anxious to cut down the top-heavy local administrative setup in the Cameroons, he began looking for likely natives to serve in local municipal offices. When he canvassed the natives of Foumban on their choice for mayor, the answer was a landslide for Sultan Seydou.

Last week, a portly 40 (in the tradition of aldermen as well as sultans), the first native mayor to be elected in the Cameroons beamed happily over the switch in his status. "Election has its good sides," Sultan Seydou told a friend, "because you always know that you have to do the right thing because otherwise you'll be fired by the voters. Acting as absolute ruler is like sitting in a dark, iron kettle with the lid on."

Communist, Sun played at best a dupe's role. In the commission's view, Sun "could not have been entirely ignorant of the conspiracy" planned by the major and broken up last summer by counterintelligence.

In letting Sun off with little more than a reprimand, the commission said it took account of his distinguished fighting record and his "admission of past mistakes and self-censure." Leniency toward Sun also served to reassure U.S. and overseas Chinese opinion, which holds Sun in high esteem and might have wondered at the implications for Nationalist China's future had so able, senior and "Western-minded" a leader been tossed overboard. Much cheered by the verdict, General Sun called last week on Vice President Chen Cheng, the commission chairman, to offer his thanks and to remind the Vice President that he is an engineer (Purdue '23) as well as a military man (V.M.I. '27). Sun's likely next assignment: Formosa's new Shihmen dam project, of which Chen Cheng is also chairman.

ASIA

Atomic Good Will

Representatives of 17 nations gathered in Singapore's blue-columned Victoria Hall last week to take stock of the Colombo Plan's first five years and to chart a course for the next six.

Started as a mutual self-help scheme among British Commonwealth nations, the Colombo Plan has since expanded to nearly all free Asian nations, produced in five years an interchange of $2 billion worth of economic development. Donor nations, e.g., Britain, Canada, Australia, have poured in capital and know-how, while recipient nations have exchanged such experts and such know-how as they have, e.g., India has sent four aeronautical engineers to Indonesia; Singapore is teaching timber grading to a Nepalese trainee; two Japanese rice physiologists are scattering seed in Ceylon.

The U.S. was not represented when the Colombo Plan (named for the Ceylon capital where the plan was hatched) began, but the U.S. began to mesh its aid programs to the plan, by last week had spread almost $1 billion of help beneath the Colombo Plan's broad canopy.

In Singapore last week, the Asians, including many who regarded direct U.S. aid as somehow "immoral" but found it acceptable when distributed through the Colombo machinery, sought out the U.S. delegate, Foreign Aid Chief John B. Hollister, to learn what fresh U.S. contributions might be expected.

Britain had promised to double its contribution (to nearly $20 million). Hollister had news even more pleasing to the Asian ear. Proposing that the Colombo powers set up an atomic energy research and training center, he announced that the U.S. is ready to give a nuclear research reactor and later, a nuclear power reactor. Said one Asian delegate: "For more than a decade, Asians have looked to the atom as a symbol of terror. Now, perhaps, it may become for us a symbol of hope."

New Play in Manhattan

Janus (by Carolyn Green) calls for somewhat faint praise but need not be damned by it. A pleasant enough, light sex farce that brings an American touch of wackiness to a French-style exercise in sin, it concerns the wife of a shipping tycoon and the schoolmaster husband of a librarian. Each summer, while the tycoon is in South America and the librarian apparently buried in the stacks, their spouses put slipcovers over their morals and spend two secret months together in New York. United by authorship as well as ardor, they write bestsellers under the name of Janus. His flat is on the floor above hers; when she wants him, she bangs on the ceiling with a broom, and he sneaks down through the dumbwaiter. Then one day her husband sails in through the door.

MARGARET SULLAVAN & ROBERT PRESTON
In the summer, she hits the ceiling.

By making all three act and react in agreeably unbourgeois fashion, Playwright Green whips the situation into a nice comic froth. Then an Internal Revenue man arrives, finds that secret joint authorship leads to curious joint tax returns, and stirs up some fiscal commotion. After that, though in a rather graceful way, Janus goes downhill.

If never the least bit brilliant, the play is never just silly or frantic either. What is perhaps nicest about it is its prevailingly playful tone. What is weakest is its dialogue, which is too seldom really bright and too often near-neighbor to the gag. Fortunately, a number of lines that were not born witty achieve a certain wit through the adroitness of the cast. Margaret Sullavan, Claude Dauphin, and Robert Preston as the tycoon, lend a certain airy charm, provide a certain steady carbonation.

Our General Motors designers — as these pictures show—have just about revolutionized the appearance of that popular family car-of-all-work — the station wagon.

And they've done so without losing any of its practical features. Its roominess. Its ruggedness. Its adaptability as a family carryall for everything from crates to cats, groceries to Great Danes.

So now you can enjoy all these benefits — of such particular importance to suburban family life—and at the same time possess a car second to none in styling beauty — from panoramic windshield to wider-vision rear window.

Yes — as your dealer will be delighted to demonstrate — in station wagons, as in 4-door hardtops and all the other General Motors style leaders for '56 — your key to greater value is the key to a General Motors car.

Hard top, soft top or open—the Thunderbird is the star in any setting!

And now: the latest version of America's most exciting car:

Ford THUNDERBIRD for '56

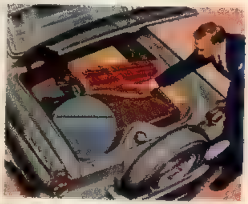
Ready to give you a new lease on driving fun, this newest version of America's favorite dream car is more stunning in style . . . more thrilling in power . . . more luxurious in comfort.

Here poised for flight, you see what many people hardly dreamed possible: a more beautiful, more powerful, more distinctive Thunderbird.

The graceful contours of its long, low lines . . . the unique flair of its new spare-tire mounting . . . the dazzling sheen of its new two-tone colors are but a hint of its newness.

It is when you put the selector in drive position and nudge the gas pedal of a Fordomatic model that the Thunderbird will really take you by the heart. Beneath the hood is a new 225 h.p. Thunderbird Y-8, to revise your ideas of how a car should respond.

Now, you may choose hard top, soft top or both. There's a glass-fibre hard top and a foldaway fabric top. Now, the interiors are richer—more beautiful than ever. Now, you get the added protection of Ford's exclusive Lifeguard design. And, as always, you may have optional power steering, brakes, windows and seat. Ask your Ford Dealer just how soon you can start enjoying the better things of driving.



The Thunderbird's brand-new, rear spare-tire mounting folds back handily as quick as a wink. It adds as greatly to your luggage space as it does to the over-all beauty of the car.

Modern rail service for the modern South!

"The Southern Serves the South" is more than a slogan. It is a simple statement of fact.

Southern Railway System's 8,000-mile network of lines serves every state but one south of the Potomac and Ohio Rivers and east of the Mississippi. It connects almost every major city in the Southland to traffic gateways leading to the rest of America.

It takes a combination of all kinds of economic advantages to bring about industrial growth such as the South has seen in recent years. One of these advantages is the modern, dependable, ever-improving transportation service of the railway that "Serves the South."

spread. In the bridge wing by the splinter shield the admiral looked grim.

"Why did he attack, Dave? Was he just trigger-happy?"

"Sir, I doubt it. I judge his contact this trip is of great importance. He is not a fool. He attacked deliberately. If he missed, he estimated we would make a time-consuming search. He won't be here. He is on the surface, running at high speed for rendezvous." Commander Jones was frowning at the night. "If we find him, sir, I'll have to take him under fire."

"Affirmative. You find him, Dave."

"There'll be some moonlight in the morning watch," the Watling's captain murmured, "and I think he'll use it. I mean to be up near the Pescadores by then. He must make his transfer on the surface, and the islands will fuzz up the radar. He'll use that too. If we want a shot, we will probably have to get it fast. If we should catch him dead astern, he'd dive before I could turn to unmask the battery. I intend to put local control on the after guns. I've got a smart mount captain back in Number Three. My gunnery officer has the plan already. He'll split main battery at oh-four-fifty hours."

That's how it happened in the USS James Watling, prowling dark and narrow water off Formosa in the morning watch. And Russ, mount captain back in No. 3, was waiting for the word he knew would come. The men were murmuring in there, their shadows huge, light glinting weirdly from the battle lamps along the breeches of the twin five-inchers. Russ was quieting the squirm he felt inside. It always started when he knew the guns would soon be his. When he felt like that, he started thinking about Julie Jones. It always helped. And he was thinking of her now before the quick voice from the main director sounded in his earphones.

"Mount Number Three! Control!"

Russ pressed the button on his mouthpiece. "Mount Three, aye!"

"You will go to local control according to plan." The gunnery officer's voice was clear and sharp. "Keep a sharp lookout in your sector astern. Use the glasses! If you see that sub, you cry it up here if there's time. If there isn't, shoot! Be plenty sure it's a submarine you're shooting at or your tail is in an awful sling. Understand?"

"Yes, sir, I understand."

"And keep an ear glued to that squawk box! When I want those guns up here again, I want them quick. O.K. Go to local control. You're on your own."

So Russ, on the mount captain's platform, had his head and shoulders above the open little hatch. Wind rushed against him. He could see the thin flakes of moonlight on dark water. Glasses against his eyes, he swept his sector and swept back. The Watling kept on probing, sound gear pinging. She was close against the Pescadores, near Hatto Retto now, land echoes bouncing on the radarscope. If radar or the topside lookouts couldn't pick up surface contact, how could Russ? The squirming twisted in his belly now. He thought of Julie Jones. . . .

Julie gave that funny little hop on one foot, the very first time he met her in Bolari's down on Geary Street off San Francisco's Union Square. Someone was in her way. She was skipping lightly to one side and didn't make it. She slammed into Russ and fell. He remembered how she looked, dark-headed, dainty and very mature, sitting on Bolari's floor and smiling up at him.

"Well, for heaven's sake," her low voice said, "don't stand there grinning, sailor. Help me up. I'm very glad it was you. You're the one, all right. I can tell. You give me the wibbledey-wobs inside."

"I do?" Russ still was grinning. He reached down. She took hold of his hand and bounced lightly to her feet. Somehow they were sitting down for coffee together. "What do you mean, I'm the one?"

"Well, I'm Julie. Who are you?"

"Russ. Russ Jones."

"Oh, no, not that! Then I'll never even change my name!"

"What are you talking about?"

"Us. I'm Julie Jones. I was always sure I'd know the minute I saw him. But I thought when I got married I'd be somebody else. Not Jones. Shows you, I guess. I ——"

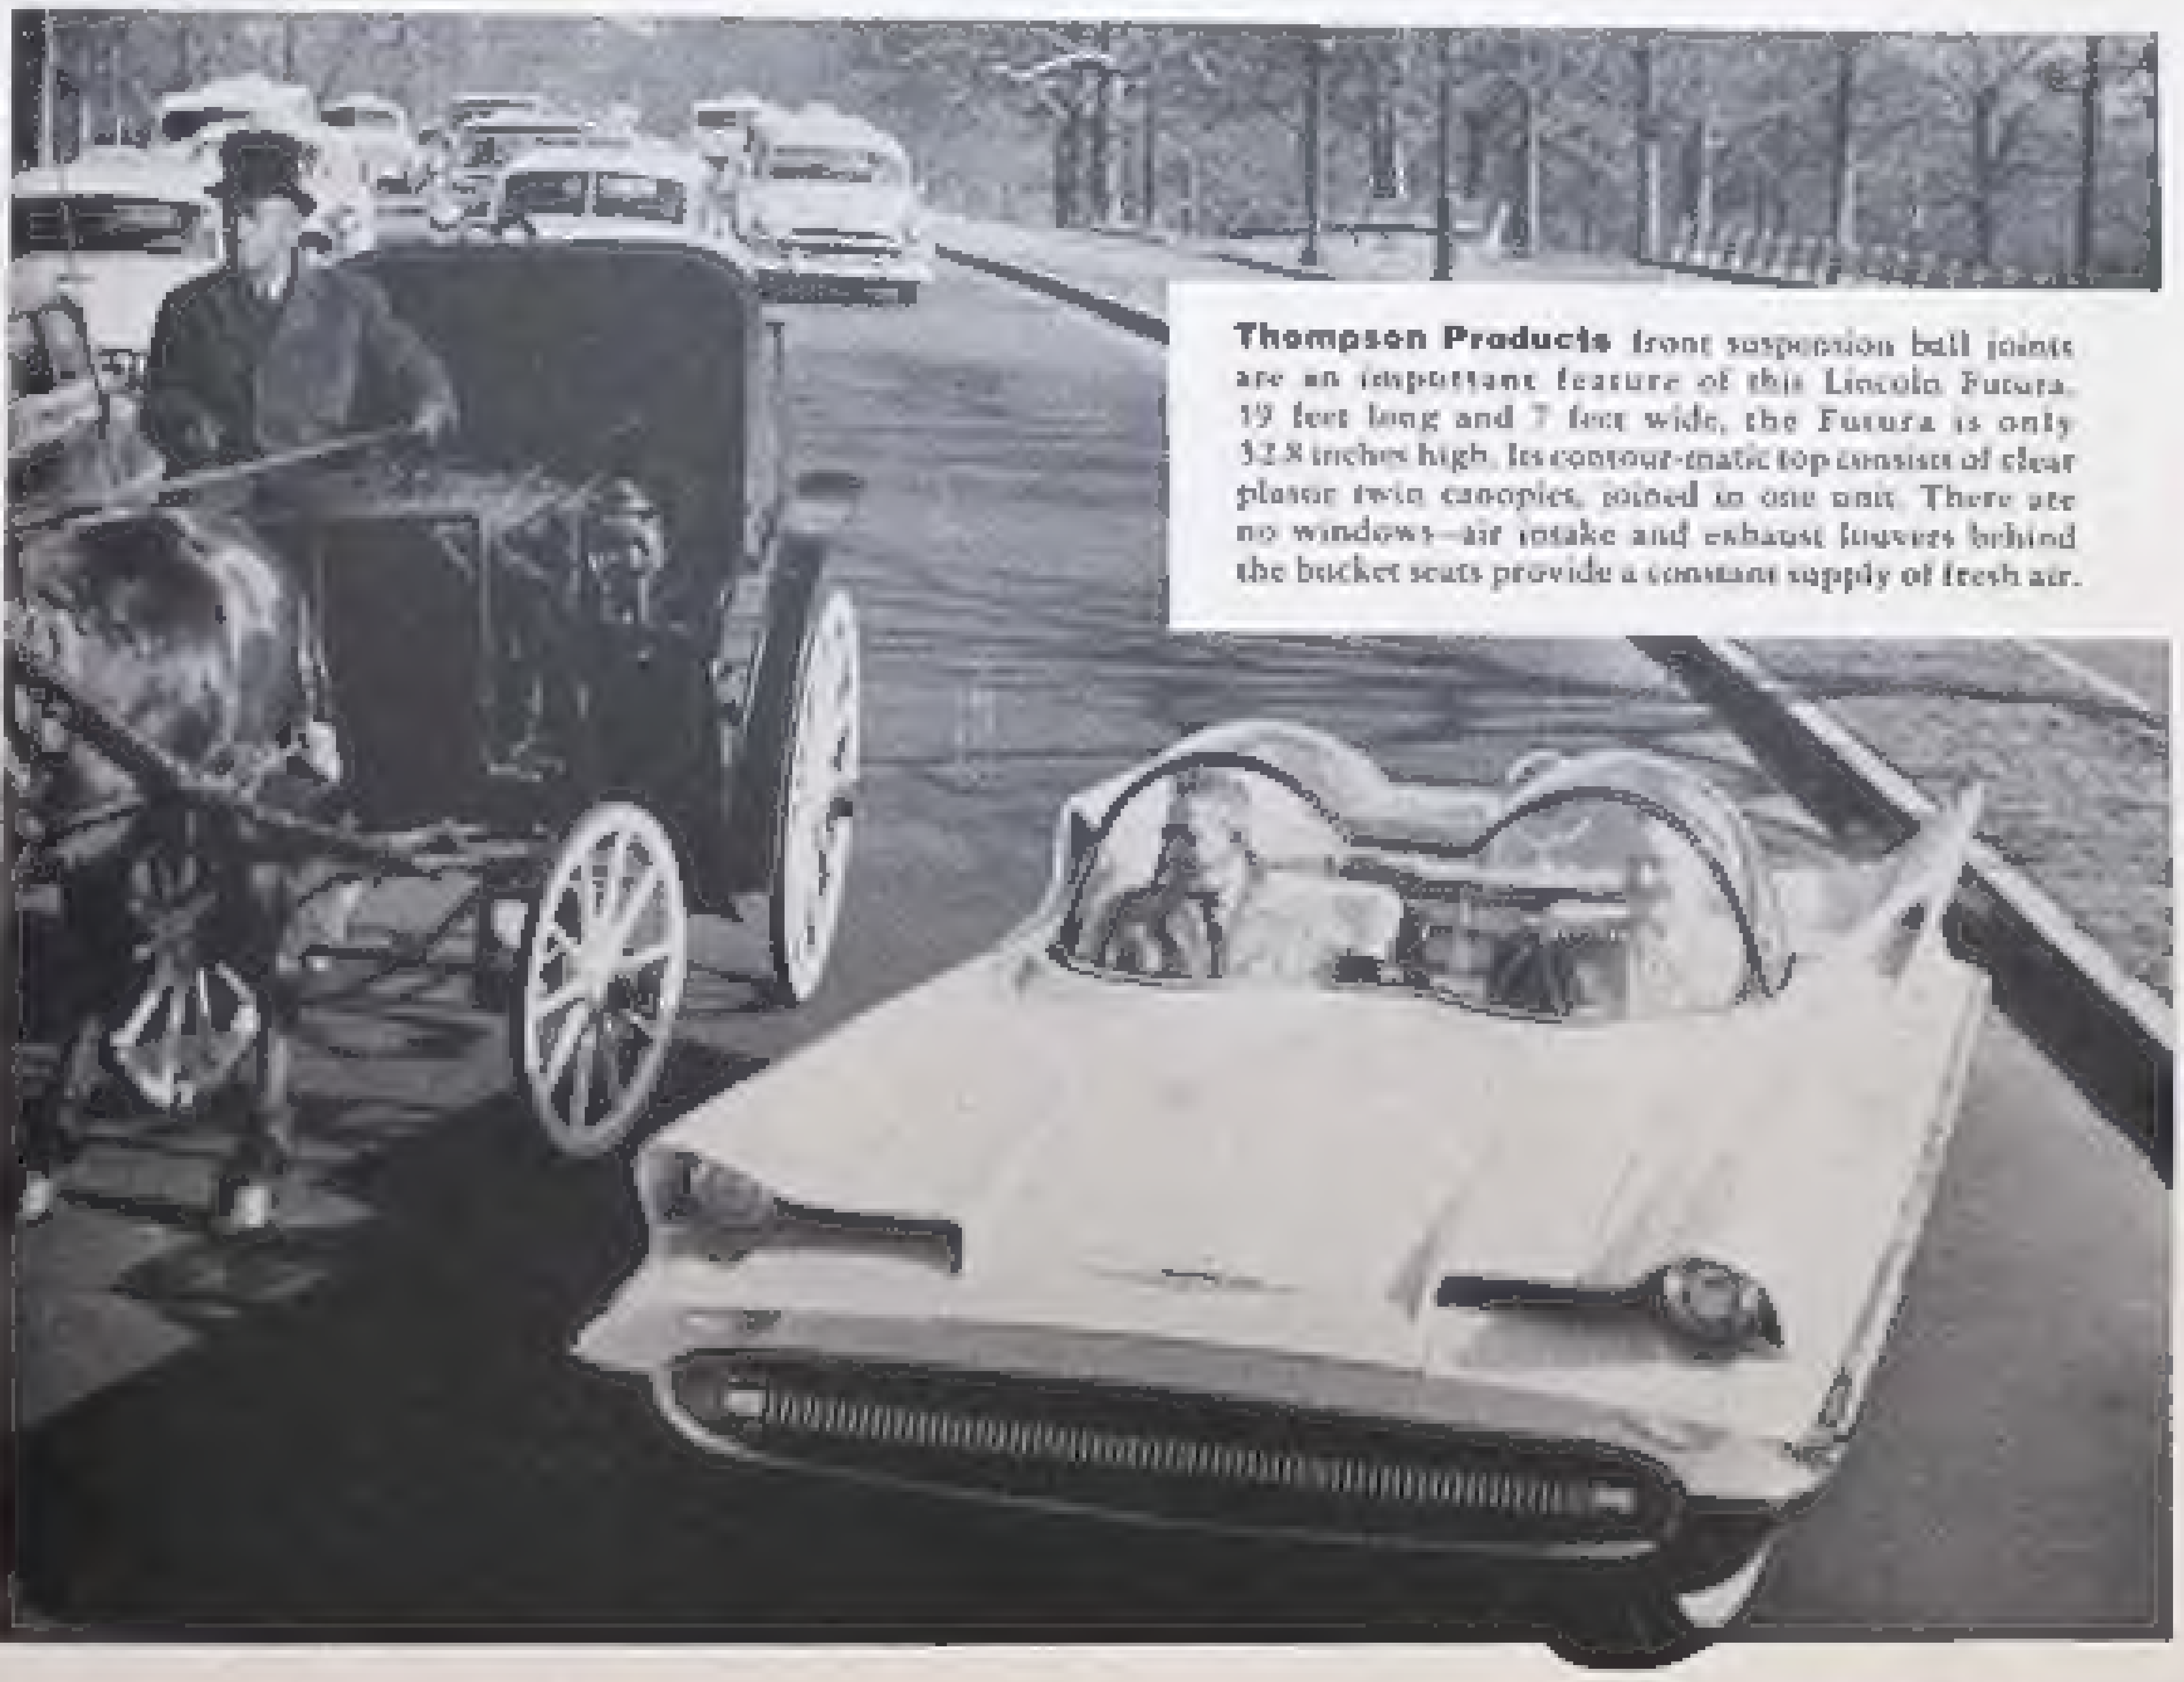
"Married? Are you nuts?"

"No." She sighed. She was very serious. "I just think when you see a thing and you know for sure that it's true, you've got to speak it out. You're not much good if you don't. I know it's you. I was always sure that I'd know."

"You really are nuts, aren't you?" Russ grinned. He was puzzled, though. He felt very funny inside. Maybe it was the wibbledey-wobs. "I don't intend to get married," he said flatly. "Not until I make chief at least."

"Oh, that's all right. I'll wait."

She kept on looking at him with her fine, wide eyes. Russ frowned at her and shook his head. But he didn't go away. He saw her often after that. And that's what he was thinking about in the USS James Watling, just before dawn twilight thinned the night. . . .



Thompson Products front suspension ball joints are an important feature of this Lincoln Futura. 19 feet long and 7 feet wide, the Futura is only 52.8 inches high. Its contour-matic top consists of clear plastic twin canopies, joined in one unit. There are no windows—air intake and exhaust louvers behind the bucket seats provide a constant supply of fresh air.

You'll find Thompson Products ball joints TODAY on Lincoln's "CAR OF TOMORROW"!

- Revolutionary styling and advanced mechanical design mark the $250,000 "Futura"
- Ball joint front suspension permits "Dream Car" to hug road, steer easier and safer

Lincoln's aptly-named "Futura" gives you an exciting peek into America's automotive future.

This quarter-million-dollar 330 HP beauty, a one-of-a-kind "laboratory on wheels", was launched to test radical drawing-board engineering theories on the road . . . also to test public reaction to its ultra-advanced styling.

But this astonishing new car is not built entirely of "laboratory" innovations. Incorporated in it are several advanced features that you may have now when you buy a new car. Among them are power-steering, power brakes and Thompson front suspension ball joints.

Three years ago the revolutionary Thompson-engineered front suspension ball joints made headlines as the first major improvement in front suspension in 20 years. It was found to help cars hug the road and make steering easier and safer. Already several of America's top passenger cars have adopted it.

The development and mass production of this revolutionary product is a typical example of Thompson's side-by-side cooperation with the automotive industry. For more than 50 years Thompson has been a leading original equipment and replacement parts manufacturer for the automotive and aircraft industries. Other industries, too, have grown to "count on Thompson" ...agriculture, home appliances, metallurgy, electronics and many others. Thompson Products, Inc., General Offices, Cleveland 17, Ohio.

Thompson ball joints (as shown at left) permit both right-and-left steering on ball bearings and up-and-down motion on spherical bearing surfaces. This advanced front suspension principle not only makes steering safer and easier . . . it also allows valuable extra space for larger, more powerful engines, for more functional chassis design, for more dramatic body lines (as shown at right in the closeup of the Futura's front end.)

Reno TV Distributor hits Jackpot!

(Thanks to Western Pacific's PERSONAL SERVICE!)

TV dealers in Nevada and eastern California were frantically calling John Dermody, Osborne & Dermody, Reno, begging for more sets to supply the last-minute Christmas rush. A carload was on the way, but would it arrive in time?

Mr. Dermody, a longtime Western Pacific customer, knew where to turn for help. He called Frank Rowe, the WP's General Agent in Reno, who teletyped the dispatcher and learned that the car had just been turned over to Western Pacific and was on its way West as part of a fast freight. It would be delivered at noon the next day. Rowe, however, figured out a way to beat this by four important hours, representing thousands of dollars in Christmas sales of TV sets. He called the Trainmaster and arranged a special stop at Osborne & Dermody's warehouse as the train came into Reno early the next morning, rather than handle the car as part of the normal switching operation.

So impressed was Mr. Dermody by this example of personal service that he included a "credit line" for Western Pacific on his company's TV show that evening!
